SULZER AND GLYNN EACH CLAIMS HE'S GOV. OF NEW YORK

Machinery of State Government Threatens to Be Thrown Out of Gear by Attempts of Rivals to Direct It

MRS. SULZER'S CONDITION GROWS MORE CRITICAL

Specialists Are at Her Bedside Constantly—Her Temperature Rises — Gov. Sulzer Keeps Silent

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Two claimants to the office of governor of New York sat in the capitol today, each attempting to conduct the state's affairs from his own chambers.

William Sulzer, impeached governor, sat in the executive chamber on the second floor of the building. He is going to sit there every day, according to friends, disregarding the impeachment proceedings which he regards as unconstitutional.

Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant governor, laid claim to the office on the grounds that Sulzer ceased to be governor when the senate received the articles of impeachment yesterday.

The army of state employes is demoralized. Department heads are at a loss to know whose instructions to follow.

Mrs. Sulzer, star witness of the impeached governor is so seriously ill with a nervous disorder that two additional specialists have been summoned to attend her. Governor Sulzer asserted emphatically that he would not permit her to take the stand at his trial for impeachment which probably will start September 22.

The articles of impeachment, complaint and summons were served on Governor Sulzer immediately after his arrival at the capitol.

"I am directed by the president of the senate," said the senate's clerk, "to serve upon you a summons and complaint and articles of impeachment."

Governor Sulzer took the papers, glanced at them and tossed them unopened on his desk.

"All right," he said.

Immediately afterward his private secretary made the following announcement to newspaper men:

"The governor has been enjoined by his counsel from making any statement. I will say, however, on his behalf, that illness of Mrs. Sulzer is giving the governor considerable concern. Her condition last night was very serious. The specialist summoned from New York last night is here and the governor today summoned two other doctors to attend her."

Governor Sulzer retired to his private office at 11:30 o'clock for a series of conferences.

Mrs. Sulzer's temperature was 102, her pulse 110, her condition serious and she can see no one, according to a bulletin issued at noon.

EMPLOYES DEMORALIZED.

Never in the history of the state has its army of employes been more demoralized. Nor does this panic affect only the internal affairs of New York. It extends to the state's relation with other commonwealths and unless the issue is speedily settled there is every indication that other states will shortly find themselves in the perplexing situation of deciding for themselves who is governor of New York.

An instance of this situation was revealed in the announced intention of both Glynn and Sulzer to sign requisition papers for prisoners held in the name of New York beyond the borders.

Whatever today may bring forth, leaders of the two factions expected no settlement of the problem until after the meeting of the legislature next Tuesday. Then, they believe the issue will be joined and ready for submission to the courts by the legislature's formal recognition of Lieutenant Governor Glynn as acting governor.

GLYNN MAKES APPOINTMENT.

Reports today were that such recognition would be granted by the senate by confirming Governor Glynn's appointment of a state labor commissioner.

Abram I. Elkus, of New York City, was said to be the man favored for the office.

The great seal of the state of New York still was in Governor Sulzer's possession this forenoon, notwithstanding his opponents claim that it legally passed out of his keeping at the time the custody of the lieutenant governor when the senate received the articles of impeachment yesterday. Sulzer still occupies the executive chamber and will continue to use it or attempt to do so until the impeachment trial is under way. He still occupies the executive mansion.

Although Governor Sulzer and his counsel—a group with wide reputation as lawyers of ability—planned to ignore the impeachment formally for the time being on the grounds that it was unconstitutional, the governor will make a spirited defense before the court of impeachment which meets September 22. At this meeting it is expected preparations will be made to begin the trial on September 22.

MRS. SULZER COLLAPSES.

The governor's wife, star witness for the defense, was in a state of collapse at the executive mansion this forenoon. To friends who visited her bedside yesterday she declared hysterically that she was the one to blame for bringing to her husband the mountain of trouble he faces. A specialist on nervous disorders is in constant attendance upon her.

Her illness has affected the governor deeply.

When he learned the serious nature of her ailment last night he declared he would never permit her to take the

MOTHERS GET EQUAL CUSTODY OF CHILDREN BY ACTION OF SENATE

Upper Branch of Legislature Follows Action of House and Upsets Old Law Handed Down by England

MEASURE NOW ONLY NEEDS SIGNATURE OF GOVERNOR

Only Two Senators Vote Against Bill Giving Mothers Right to Equal Custody With Fathers for Minor Children

The rights of mothers to an equal claim with fathers for the custody of minor children has been recognized by the Georgia legislature. By a vote of 36 to 2 the senate Thursday afternoon passed the bill which eliminates the prima facie rights vested in fathers and leaves to the discretion of the judges the awarding of minor children as between the mother and father.

This bill passed the house by a large majority on Monday morning. It now needs but the signature of Governor Slaton to become a law, and there is no doubt that the governor will approve it.

The bill which has passed both houses of the legislature was drafted by Senator E. L. Smith as a substitute for a bill orginally introduced in the house by Representatives S. L. Olive and John Y. Smith.

Following is the bill:

"A bill to be entitled an act to define the duties, rights and powers of the courts of this state in all cases affecting the custody of minor children, and for other purposes.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the

WASHINGTON OFFERING $100,000 FOR TY COBB

Clark Griffith Offers Record Price for the Great "Georgia Peach"

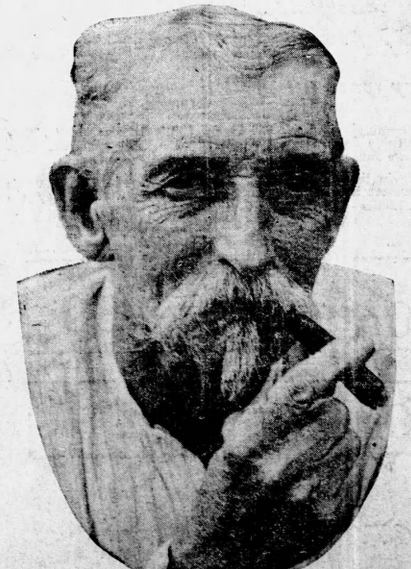
BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—The Washington American league baseball club, through Manager Clark Griffith has offered the Detroit club $100,000 cash for Ty Cobb, the Georgia peach, according to a special from Detroit to the Washington Times. The story says that Griffith will make the offer to President Navin just before the start of today's game, and believes that the Detroit magnate will accept the check for $100,000, which is the largest price ever offered for a baseball player.

Cobb is a prime favorite in Washington, and on his last visit to this city indicated a willingness to play with the local club.

With Cobb in the line-up, Washington fans agree with Griffith that the Nationals would win the pennant next year.

DEATH MAY FREE HIM



"OLD BILL" MINER.

"Old Bill" Miner Is Dying; His Shackles Are Off Now He's Ready for Last Escape

Noted Old Outlaw May Not Live Rest of Week, Doctors at State Prison Farm Say, "Old Bill" Man of Daring Career

"Old Bill" Miner is about to make his last escape. "Old Bill" is about to seek a refuge where pursuit cannot follow.

And there, you may be sure, an account will be taken of his "ten commandments" as well as of his adventures with the law, his little tilts with justice out in the western country, also in England, Ireland and Scotland, up to the very mouth of the Danube, in China, in Australia, and even along the west coast of Africa.

"Old Bill," who sought the open road and followed it up and down the world, but with never a moment's forgetfulness of his "ten commandments"—this old man who is a gentleman and a train robber in one is dying at the state's prison farm at Milledgeville.

"You'll never keep me here," said Bill, about three years ago when he began a twenty-year sentence. "I'm young enough to get out of jail, even if I can't keep out."

The truth was, Bill verged upon seventy years. But that old undaunted spirit which had set him to seeking adventure from country to country took no account of years.

"I've still got my eye on the Paris to Constantinople express," observed "Old Bill," caressing his gray goatee in a way that he had. "I'll be out before you know it."

And he was.

This old man, almost seventy broke jail, and was hunted for days through the woods near the prison farm. He endured almost unbelievable exposure, and showed a nerve that age hadn't weakened the least bit.

"Old Bill" Miner at seventy years of age had the spirit of Young Bill Miner at twenty.

"I'll be out again soon," was all he had to say when he found himself back at the prison farm.

AND THEY FOUND "BILL" GONE.

The months passed, and one fine morning came when guards found the bars of a window sawed out, and "Bill" missing. This time he took to the swamps near the prison, and for days lived there, no food, nothing but the brackish water to drink.

When at last "Bill" was captured, his strength was broken. The exposure which he had endured had suddenly made him a feeble old man. It was pitiful to see 'Bill" as he tottered round the prison yard.

For discipline's sake, more than anything else, chains had been put upon his ankles.

"But I'll take them off," agreed the warden. "If you'll promise not to escape again."

"Well, I don't know," said Bill. I've got sorter used to them. Guess I'd better keep them on."

HIS "TEN COMMANDMENTS."

Feeble as he was, he yet thought of escape. He wouldn't give his word, because he meant to have another try for liberty if the opportunity came, and one

SENATE RECOMMENDS A WAYWARD GIRLS' HOME

Committee, However, Cuts Appropriation to One-Third Its Size

The appropriations committee of the senate passed favorably upon the house bill providing for a home for wayward girls in Georgia with the amendment that the appropriation of $30,000 be decreased to $10,000.

This amendment was made at the motion of Senator Stark, who informed the committee that he had been told by Governor Slaton that he would veto the bill if it carried more than $10,000.

The Swift-Slade-Wohlwender inheritance tax bill passed the senate by a vote of 27 to 0.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY TO ADJOURN EARLY IN DAY

For First Time in Many Years No Night Session Will Mark Close

If present indications are not misleading, the general assembly of Georgia will have finished its work some time Thursday afternoon, obviating the necessity of a long-drawn out night session that almost invariably runs into the wee sma' hours of the early morning, though the hands of the house and senate clocks are never allowed to work past midnight.

The matter of tax equalization is settled and it seems probable that the senate will concur with the house in restoring the budget to the figures contained in the original general appropriations bill. Aside from this, there is little else to do, and apparently the legislature will be ready to adjourn sine die before the setting of another sun.

The law-making machinery of the state, sluggish at first, began to hum at the beginning of the last week with the result that legislation that seemed doomed to lie over to next summer has been enacted in record-breaking time.

Prison reformers won and lost in the house at the afternoon session Wednesday. The indeterminate sentence bill

FRANK WAS SEEN BY WITNESSES ON HIS WAY TO AND FROM HOME DAY LITTLE GIRL WAS KILLED

Solicitor Declares That Outburst of Yesterday Should Not Be Allowed and That as There Is Further Unpleasant Testimony to Be Heard, He Suggests That Frank's Wife and Mother Do Not Hear It—Judge Issues Caution

MOTION OF ATTORNEY ROSSER TO STRIKE OUT SENSATIONAL QUESTIONS IS OVERRULED

Solicitor Dorsey's Questions Put to John Ashley Jones Will Stand and the Defense Will Be Forced to Disprove Suggestions Given to Jury by Cross-Questioning Witnesses Whom Solicitor Will Summon in Rebuttal

There were three big features in the Thursday morning session of the trial of Leo M. Frank:

First, the request of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey that the mother and wife of the accused be excluded from the court room to prevent an interruption similar to that made by Mrs. Rae Frank Wednesday afternoon. Judge Roan did not grant the request but cautioned the ladies that they must contain themselves.

Second, the overruling of a motion made by the defense to strike from the record the sensational questions and answers reflecting on Frank's character elicited Wednesday afternoon during the examination of John Ashley Jones, a character witness.

Third, a formidable presentation of evidence corroborating Frank's story in reference to his movements on the day of the tragedy.

Through the witnesses who testified Thursday the defense showed that Frank was on his way home at 1:10 o'clock and that he was on his way back to the factory at 2 o'clock. Previously Emil Selig had testified that Frank reached his home at 68 East Georgia avenue about 1:20 o'clock. The superintendent's story of where he was and what he did immediately before and immediately after the tragedy has, therefore, been very strongly corroborated.

Miss Helen Curran, of 160 Ashby street, stenographer, whose father works for Montag Bros., and who herself is employed by the Bismuth Printing company, testified that she saw Frank in front of Jacobs' Alabama and Whitehall streets store at 1:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. M. G. Michael, of Athens, aunt of Mrs. Lucile Frank, saw Frank, she testified, in front of her sister's, Mrs. C. Wolfsheimer, home, 387 Washington street, Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock. Frank came over and spoke to her, she said. Jerome Michael, her son, also saw Frank in front of the Wolfsheimer residence. Mrs. A. B. Leavy, of 69 East Georgia avenue, Mrs. Wolfsheimer, Julian Loeb and Miss Rebecca Carson were other witnesses who testified to seeing Frank either on his way home shortly after 1 o'clock or as he returned to the factory about 2 o'clock.

Cohen Loeb, of 445 Washington srteet, testified that he rode to the city on the car with Frank as he was returning to the factory about 2 o'clock and that he sat in the same seat with him.

Sig Montag, one of the proprietors of the factory, proved an important witness. In addition to corroborating Frank's statement in reference to his visit to Montag Bros. Saturday morning, Mr. Montag swore that prior to January 1, another concern occupied the floor space which included the point where Conley claimed that he was accustomed to sit when he acted as a "lookout" for Frank and that the negro would hardly have been sitting there. Through Mr. Montag the defense developed that it was he who employed counsel for the defendant without any request for a lawyer having been made by Frank. The cross-examination the solicitor drew from Mr. Montag the admission that the Pinkertons had not yet been paid for their services, that they had made several statements, but had made no requests for payment. Mr. Montag admitted also the finding of the bloody stick and a portion of the payment envelope by the Pinkertons had been reported to him and that he notified Mr. Rosser, but did not notify the police.

Another witness for the defense who gave interesting testimony was Miss Rebecca Carson, forelady at the factory, who swore that Jim Conley said to her on Monday after the murder that he was not at the factory Saturday and that he was so drunk he didn't know what he did or where he was.

Among the witnesses examined during the morning was Charley Lee, employed as a machinist at the factory and well known to public as a prizefighter. Lee whipped "Kid" Young, the idol of the newsies Wednesday night, in the fourth round of a bout at the auditorium.

Attorneys for both the state and the defense continued to contest every point and there were frequent clashes during the morning. Mr. Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey became particularly vigorous in their comments upon each other's manner of conducting the case and at one point a physical encounter was threatened.

When court convened, before the jury was brought in, Solicitor Dorsey addressed the court, asking that Mrs. Lucile Frank and Mrs. Rae Frank, wife and mother, respectively, of the accused, be excluded from the court room.

"I appreciate the feelings of the wife and the mother of this defendant," said the solicitor, "but there is going to be much more testimony which will be very objectionable to them. And if we are to have such outbreaks as that one of yesterday, I feel that I must ask your honor to exclude these two ladies from the court as you have excluded all others. I sympathize with them, and I am very sorry for them, but I must ask the court's protection. There is no reason but simply because they are the wife and the mother of the accused that they should have any more rights than any one else in this case, and they should not be allowed to give vent to their feelings before the jury."

MR. ARNOLD REPLIES.

Mr. Arnold said: "Without any criticism, I want to say that the solicitor's examination of Mr. Jones yesterday was wholly unwarranted and much more reprehensible than the act of this man's mother. The solicitor tried to get before the jury in an illegal way specific acts which he could not get before it in a legal way and acts which he knows your honor would have ruled out, as only his general character can be attacked. He had no idea that Jones knew anything about these things to which he referred in his questions. He simply made an appeal to the crowd and to the jury by charging specific acts which he could not get in evidence. Does your honor call that good practice, honorable practice, high-class practice, when a man is on trial for his life? My friend is zealous, maybe over-zealous, but I have no right to criticise. I can only ask that illegal evidence be excluded. The issue in this case has been clouded with a thousand things which should never have been allowed. The jury system is very lame if this sort of evidence is to be admitted. The jurors are honorable men, but they do not know how to separate reflections upon a man from direct evidence in a case.

The state's counsel, a learned and skilful lawyer, by his suggestions, was much more reprehensible than the mother of this defendant. It is a new doctrine, and I have heard of only one other judge in Georgia allowing it, to keep the wife and mother from sitting in a court in a man's hour of need. Have we reached such a point in prosecution and persecution that this can be done? I promise no more outbreaks as far as I can control them, and I call your honor's attention to the fact that the wife has sat through this whole case without a word and the mother has committed only one little outbreak. Under all circumstances, my friend's conduct was much more culpable. He is not justified in doing such things because he is the state's attorney. I don't believe that he will state that he thought Mr. Jones knew anything about these circumstances, for he knows that Jones does not move in

LAWYERS WANT ATLANTA ATTORNEY AS NEW JUDGE

Randolph Praises Roan, but Declares Fulton County Should Be Honored

Hollins N. Randolph, chairman of a committee of twenty-five from the Atlanta bar, Thursday made the following statement in reference to the appointment soon to be made by Governor Slaton for the new judgeship of the Atlanta circuit:

"I see an article in the morning paper referring to the new judgeship of the Atlanta circuit from which it would seem to appear that a number of Atlanta attorneys are supporting Judge L. S. Roan, of the Blue Mountain circuit, for that position. The names which appear, however, I notice are those which were signed to a petition circulated by Judge Roan's friends long before the passage of the bill creating the Atlanta judgeship.

"Since the passage of the bill by the legislature a large and representative meeting of the Atlanta lawyers was held and resolutions unanimously adopted calling on the governor to appoint an Atlanta man to the new judgeship. This resolution was as follows:

"'Whereas, a bill has been recently passed by the general assembly providing for the appointment by the governor of a fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit, and

"'Whereas, elevation to the bench has ever been regarded as a worthy reward for faithful, correct and efficient service as an attorney, where to such service is united good character and judicial fitness, and

"'Whereas, there are among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar residing in Fulton county many men as fully qualified by faithfulness of service, character and judicial fitness to hold such position as can be found in the state:

"'Therefore, the undersigned members of the Atlanta bar hereby petition his excellency, the governor, to appoint the fourth Judge of the Atlanta circuit from among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar who have been residents of Fulton county for a period of at least three years.'

LAWYERS ATTEND.

"A very large number of the lawyers whose names appear in the morning paper were present at the meeting referred to at which the above resolution was unanimously adopted and have signed the petition to the governor asking for the appointment of an Atlanta man, and many of them have formally notified the governor besides that they felt impelled from a sense of fitness of things and a proper sense of duty to support a Fulton county lawyer for the position.

"I do not believe there is a man in Fulton county who holds Judge Roan in higher personal esteem, both as a man and as a judge, than I do, and in no sense whatever should this movement be construed as any sort of an attack on him nor as in any sense disparaging his great abilities, but we are fixed in our belief and opinion that a lawyer long a resident of and a practitioner in Atlanta ought, in the nature of things, to be appointed to the office of an Atlanta judgeship.

"There are many lawyers in Atlanta eminently qualified for the position, and while we congratulate the people of the Stone Mountain circuit for possessing such an able man to preside over their courts, as we concede Judge Roan to be, nevertheless, we feel that the people of Fulton county are also proper subjects of congratulation inasmuch as in our opinion the governor will not have to go outside of Fulton cunty to find a man eminently qualified to preside over their new court.

200 WANT ATLANTIAN.

"Already nearly 200 of the 300 active members of the Atlanta bar have signed a petition to the governor asking him to appoint one of their number, properly qualified, of course, to the new judgeship, and additional signatures are being voluntarily made daily. In fact, the principle of home rule for judges is, I believe, practically unanimous among the bar of Atlanta and the people as well.

"The committee of the Atlanta bar having this matter in charge is as follows: H. N. Randolph, chairman; Albert Howell, Jr., Clifford L. Anderson, Shepard Bryan, Eugene Dodd, Victor Lamar Smith, George Westmoreland, E. V. Carter, Samuel D. Hewlett, Samuel N. Evins, W. A. Wimbish, R. P. Jones, J. M. Wood, Paul E. Johnson, W. Carroll Latimer, Lee M. Jordon, W. J. Tilson, Philip H. Alston, Harrison Jones, Hudson Moore, ohn A. Hynds, Van Antor Batchelor, Thomas H. Goodwin, W. H. Terrell, Winfield Jones, H. M. Patty."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE RIGHT MADE BY SOLONS

One Legislator Denounces Newspaper and Another Attacks House Rule

Two points of personal privilege were made by members of the state senate Wednesday morning, one by Senator M. C. Tarver and another by Senator R. T. DuBose.

Senator Tarver protested against the rules of both houses which turned over all legislation during the last seven days of each session to committees which had the power to put any bills they wanted to on the calendar. He based his protest on the fact that his own bill, senate bill No. 2, providing for recovery in cases of homicide, was passed three weeks ago in one house and had never come up for passage in the other.

Senator DuBose arose on the floor to take exception to a story which appeared in an Atlanta morning paper of August 14. In speaking of Senator DuBose's action on the tax reform question the story says that he went directly counter to the wishes and the interests of the people he represents, and that while no one doubts his sincerity that his attitude was none the less remarkable and difficult to explain.

In speaking of the article on the floor of the senate, Senator DuBose said in part: "I know better than this reporter what the interests of my people are. I do not have to go to him or to the paper he represents to know how to vote. Five out of six of my own representatives voted against this measure. If I were in politics I would be glad to go before the people with this tax measure the main issue and should the occasion arise I would courteously invite the editor of this paper to meet me on the stump to discuss the question."

COCHRAN DENIES CHARGES AS TO TAX LAW ATTITUDE

Writes Card Replying to Criticism Concerning His Attitude Toward Measure

The Journal received Thursday the following statement from Ralph O. Cochran:

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 14, 1913.
Editor Atlanta Journal, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir: There appeared in an Atlanta paper this morning certain criticisms of my attitude on the equalization tax law which has been passed by the general assembly and also my vote concerning appropriations for the various institutions of the state.

This article goes on to say that I have opposed equaliaztion in all of the forms in which it has been presented to the ways and means committee and also to the house. This is not true. The ways and means committee with whom I was associated, know that I have uniformly stood for the county boards to equalize taxes. On the other hand, I have uniformly been opposed to the state board and to the spy system that has become a part of this law. The proposition of creating county boards without the spy system and without the state board has never been submitted to the house for a vote. The senate substitute required every member of the house to either vote for it or vote against equalization in any form. I preferred to vote against the bill in its entirety when it came to a question of saddling upon the people of Georgia the substitute of the senate.

As regards my vote concerning the appropriation to the University of Georgia, I set out yesterday to vote to concur in the 7 per cent reduction of the senate on all of the appropriations to the institutions of Georgia, not only the University and the Technological school, but the common school fund of the state also. The substitute of the senate was voted on by paragrphs. The University of Georgia was the first matter that the house voted on. I voted to concur with the senate in reducing the appropriation to this institution; then I voted to concur with the senate to reduce the appropriation to the Technological school and expected to vote to concur with the senate in reducing the appropriations to all of the institutions of the state. However, as the different sections were taken up, the house saw fit to raise the appropriation of some of the institutions of the state, namely, the Girls' Normal school at Milledgeville, the agricultural college at Athens, the normal school at Valdosta and the public school fund. Of course when these raises were adopted, then I was in favor of raising the appropriation to the university, the Technological school and the other institutions of the state.

As a matter of fact, the equalization law is an experiment and as the hue and cry has been to get the state out of debt it occurred to me that it would be wise to concur in the senate amendments and hold the appropriations down for the next two years.

The feature that I regret most in the criticism of my attitude in the morning paper is the fact that probably I cast my votes this way on account of my candidacy for the United States senate. I wish to say that irrespective of my candidacy I would have voted just as I have done.

I spent three years at the University of Georgia, and anyone would know that I am a friend of this institution. The Technological school is located in Atlanta and anyone knows that I am a friend to this institution on account of local interests and local pride. I was born and reared in the country and this can be said of the most of the people who compose the citizenry of the cities of this state, and no one feels a deeper interest in the public schools of this state than I do. My voting all along has been controlled by business interests of the state and I have uniformly tried to cast my vote for the best interests of the people of this entire state.

It is further true that I have not addressed the speaker of the house during the fifty days of this session. I have contented myself with studying the provisions of the various measures which have come before the house, and I have tried to do my duty in voting properly on the various bills that we have passed upon. I have made a studied effort to avoid criticism so that I might do my duty properly, knowing that probably I would be charged with impure motives on account of my candidacy for the United States senate. However, in the last hour of this session, after the session has been spent without my having anything to say upon the floor of the house, there comes this charge which is unfair to me and unfair to the friends of the measures that I have been criticised about.

I will stand upon what I have done, irrespective of my candidacy for the United States senate or the criticism that may arise from my attitude in this matter. Respectfully,

RALPH O. COCHRAN.

Severe Cough Led to Lung Trouble

Sufferers with Lung Trouble are rarely willing to acknowledge the fact. If you have a so-called "cold" that has long persisted; or a cough that keeps you anxious; or any of the symptoms of Lung Trouble, such as fever or night sweats, weakness, loss of appetite, or perhaps some raising of mucus, take Eckman's Alterative—and Mr. Bettersworth did.

Bowling Green, Ky., R. No. 4.

"Gentlemen: The spring of 1908 I had a severe cough for six months. I tried all the medicine that my doctor recommended to me, but no results came for the better. I had night sweats, and would cough and spit until I got so weak I could hardly do anything. But, at last, James Leeing, of Glasgow Junction, insisted that I try your medicine. In one week's time there was quite an improvement in my condition, and after I had taken several bottles I felt as well as ever in my life. I desire the world to know that I firmly believe that your Eckman's Alterative will cure any case of lung trouble if taken before the last stage."

(Affidavit) A. C. BETTERSWORTH.

JUDGE HART IS MADE TAX COMMISSIONER

Former Attorney General of Georgia Accepts New State Office

Judge John C. Hart of Greene county, former attorney general of Georgia, has been appointed by Governor Slaton to fill the newly-created office of state tax commissioner. He will shortly enter upon his new duties.

The office of state tax commissioner is created by the tax equalization law, passed by the senate last week, by the house on Tuesday and signed by the governor on Wednesday. Anticipating the enactment of this statute Governor Slaton had offered the place to Judge Hart, and as soon as the bill became a law he telegraphed the judge and asked for his acceptance.

Wednesday afternoon Judge Hart wired the governor that he would accept the appointment. Governor Slaton is expected to send Judge Hart's nomination to the senate today for confirmation. As state tax commissioner Judge Hart will serve a term of six years. He will be paid a salary of $2,500 per year and will have an office in the comptroller general's department at the capitol.

It will be the duty of Judge Hart to examine the tax digests of the various counties and to bring about as far as possible an equalization of taxes as between counties.

COTTON FIELD SCENE OF ALABAMA SHOOTING

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 14.—Vague information has been received here of the shooting of G. R. Inzer, a prominent planter, at La Fine, the lower end of this county, yesterday, by Brandon Greene, a negro. Greene escaped and at last reports a sheriff's posse was in pursuit of him.

It was reported that the negro shot Mr. Inzer thre times, one of the bullets penetrating the abdomen and inflicting a most dangerous wound. The shooting occurred in a cotton field, it is said.

More definite news is expected when the posse returns.

Booklovers' Bulletin

So many of our contestants in the Booklovers' Campaign want to know how long it will take us to check up the answers received that we wish we could name an exact date and get them all checked up by that time.

There were thousands of sets received and it is a slow, tedious task to check them all and do it right, so that you will all get credit for every correct answer submitted by you. From the number left to be checked, it looks as if it will take the balance of this month at the very least to do it in, possibly a week or two longer.

As most of the contestants exercised their right to extra answers, it makes the work heavier than in our last year's campaign, because in a great many cases the correct answer is the last answer on the list for that particular picture. We wish to assure the contestants that we will do all we can to complete the work and announce the winners as soon as possible.

In our next Sunday's issue we will public the correct list of titles up to that date, so that any of you who have missed any of the correct titles as published, can see them.

FIVE YOUTHS BOUND OVER AS THIEF BAND

Police Charge Boys Had Burglarized Many Places—Swell Clothes a Specialy

That a band of five youthful burglars, ranging in age from fifteen to twenty-three years, have been operating for several months in Atlanta was the contention of police officers before Recorder Pro Tem Preston Wednesday, when the cases of the five young men were called. Four of them were bound over to the state under $2,000 bond each and the fifth under a $500 bond.

The young men gave their names and addresses as Fred Amasson, of 20 Glass street; Harry Sharpton, of 102 Gibson street; Roy Nash, of 12 Pitman Place; Lee Ellenberg, of 209 1-2 Marietta street, and Dick Coppedge.

Officers McGill and Gillespie had been detailed on the case and appeared as witnesses against the youths. Robbery after robbery, the officers claim, was traced to these boys, their depredations being confined to small groceries and dwelling houses. The places burglarized or robbed are a house at 82 West Cain street; the Gem hotel, at 175 Marietta street; a grocery at 113 Whitehall, a small safe at 102 Wells, and two dwellings on Marietta at Nos. 524 and 571.

The boys aspired to Raffles dignity and were especially strong on taking swell clothes, according to officers. Among the things taken were two dress suits with all accessories.

Two of the boys, Harry Sharpton and Roy Nash, were arrested in Savannah last week and brought back to Atlanta. These boys are the brains of the gang.

MANUFACTURERS URGED TO BUY EXHIBIT SPACE

Unless They Rally Soon Permanent Exhibit Will Fall Through

Unless the manufacturers of Atlanta rally to the support of the chamber of commerce, the plan to install a permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods on the second and third floors of the new chamber of commerce building will fall through.

Committees have been hard at work on the project for several weeks, but a great deal of space yet remains unsold, and until this is disposed of, there will not be sufficient funds to carry out the plan.

It is essential that the space be taken before the middle of next week if the movement is to succeed, and the manufacturers are earnestly urged to take action in the matter at once.

Those who decide to take space should communicate at once with W. H. Leahy at the chamber of commerce.

SAVANNAH'S NEW MEMBERS ARE AMONG MOST ACTIVE IN HOUSE

Messrs. Shuptrine and Myrick are serving their first term in the house. They came from Savannah and represent Chatham county. Notwithstanding their newness these representatives are among the leaders in the house. Both have important committee assignments and both take an active interest in matters affecting their own county as well as the state at large.

IN LOCAL THEATERS

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

FORSYTH—Vaudeville.
BIJOU—Tabloid Musical Comedy.

That the bill this week at the Forsyth is just the sort that local theatergoers want is evidenced by attendance that is remarkable in hot weather, the house having been crowded at the daily matinee and evening performances.

The novelty presented by William A. Weston and company starts as if it would be a dramatic playlet, but suddenly breaks into a musical oddity that is an applause winner.

Ralph Herz is making his first appearance in Atlanta. A good many stars have made their first visit to Atlanta because of the Forsyth, and no one of them has made a better impression than the former star of "Dr. De Luxe." The most popular number on the bill is the "Good Night" sketch presented by Franker Wood and Bunee Wyde.

For next week the headliner will be Bert French and Alise Ein, in their newest dancing success, "Dance of Fortune." Another card will be Willie Weston, the ragtime singer, and Mike Bernard, the vaudeville pianist.

Straight motion pictures, daily for 2:30 to 10 at night, at 5 cents admission attract a great many people to the Grand this week.

For next week a great feature called Victory, and exhibition in six reels lasting for nearly two hours, will be the attraction, one matinee and one night exhibition daily. The matinee admission will be 10 cents and at night the prices will be 10, 15 and 25 cents.

This picture is declared to be one of the most interesting yet produced and is full of genuine interest enlisting features. It has been run with great success in the largest cities and is another make in favor of Jake Wells' determination to give the Grand the best that is in the motion picture market. Commencing with the week of August 25 there will be a regular service of kinemacolor, a change of pictures every other day, and a complete change of genuine first run pictures every day.

Commencing with a special matinee on Labor day, Miss Emma Bunting, a favorite actress in Atlanta, will be seen at the Lyric theater for a week's engagement and will offer "The Circus Girl," a comedy in three acts by Sydney Grundy. This little actress is so well known to local playgoers that the mere announcement of her coming will be hailed with enthusiasm by her many friends and admirers in the city.

"The Circus Girl" is a new play in her repertoire and is described as one that is filled to repletion with humorous incidents and contains a part for the star which is well suited to her dainty personality. The scenes are laid in England and it was first produced in that country at the Globe theater, London.

Dainty, Cool & Inviting

Are these Kimonos at $1.19

Reserve your strength and increase your amiability by removing the annoying belts and corsets for a few hours each day. Don a cool lawn kimono and feel fresh and dainty. These kimonos are of pretty lawn with pink, blue and lavender rosebuds sprinkled down the tiny black stripes. The style is the comfortable Empire and the sizes are from 34 to 44. Dainty Neckwear Denotes the Lady

Moreover, neckwear is now the most important item of dress. All the latest costumes seem to depend upon the addition of a graceful jabot, fichu or yoke, to give them the seasonable touch. The soft frilled styles are holding good, and the collar and cuff sets will be as popular as ever. We have a lot of good values on hand, but the stock is incomplete on many numbers. Hence we are grouping these under four prices—9c, 19c, 39c and 69c.

9c For 25c white collars with Bulgarian embroideries.

19c for children's sets, white with blue and ecru with red embroidery, regular 50c sets. Crocheted yokes, Irish lace designs, frostlike in their daintiness.

39c for a jumble of good values—deep collars lace inserts, fluffy jabots and accessories formerly priced from 75c to $1.50.

69c for stock collars and collar and cuff sets in Irish lace patterns which will forget the former price marks of $1.50 to $2.50.
(Main Floor, Left Aisle.)

Laces in Profusion

To Respond to Fashion's Edict

Dame Fashion has again put the stamp of approval on laces. Lace is to be used for gowns, blouses and underwear more than ever before. We are ready to supply the demand.

10c and 12c round thread laces, in all designs, suitable for every purpose, will be sold here Friday for only 6c

Nottingham bands and shadow laces are to be particularly high in favor. We have them, in regular 25c values, for 10c

Cluny laces, in all-linen, never quite so popular as now, will be sold for 19c. These are odds and ends—we have not many edges left to match the insertions—so they are to go for 19c

12 Embroidered Robes $5.95

These are $18.50 to $27.50 robes we are talking about. Handsome and well worth the first price. What's the use of carrying 12 over until next season, when they will make such delightful party dresses for this year? Flounces are 27 inches and 45 inches deep, and the designs are unusually beautiful.

Famous Center Aisle Keeps Up Reputation

Made famous, the strain to retain honor might become a burden. This has not been the case with our most famous section. Our center aisle is always ready to gaily offer novelties and articles most in demand for attractive prices.

Is anything so dear to the feminine heart as hand-embroidered underwear? For 15c we have corset covers in good nainsook, ready to be embroidered in any of the 13 designs you prefer. These corset covers are in two styles—open in front or overhead patterns. The designs are adapted to French embroidery and are unusually dainty 15c

Hand-embroidered gowns may easily be the acquisition of anyone. We have nainsook night gowns, stamped ready for embroidery. Choice of several designs 49c

Dress the kiddies in little frocks made kimono style, with comfortable square necks. Scallop the neck and sleeves with white, red, blue or any color becoming to the soft complexion. The brown union linen dresses are of what we are thinking. They come in sizes for the toddler of two or the young lady of six years. A simple design in French embroidery makes a pretty frock with little expense or labor 25c

Pillow tops of brown linen, art denim and burlap are ready for a few stitches from feminine fingers. Use your favorite stitch—outline, cross stitch or Kensington—we have designs for all 25c

DEFENSE'S MOTION TO STRIKE SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE FAILS

the sam esphere with these people. Yet he tried to infect these specific acts to inflame the jury and to inflame the crowd."

DORSEY DEFENDS HIS COURSE.

Solicitor Dorsey: "The situation is just this. They have put his character in issue. Your honor knows that I can't bring out specific acts, but that they can by cross examination. I did not call attention to anything that I could not support by the testimony of reputable witnesses, some of whom I consider highstoned ladies. I have a right to contrast what Jones knows about this defendant with what these people know. I know that I couldn't get these specific acts in, but I know that I was acting in perfectly good faith when I put in the defense's hand these things which they can bring out on cross examination from the witnesses that I will put up—if they dare. I am not over zealous in this case. I am doing my duty. I want right to triumps. I submit that it is unfair to exclude these ladies from the court room and extend the courtesy to the wife and mother, and then let them give vent to such outbursts as that of yesterday. I think it is the duty of the court to prevent such outbreaks.

"I would like tol mention the conduct of Mr. Arnold. The courts have ruled that it is highly improper for an attorney to express an opinion about the evidence, and yet before I scarcely had finished my question he characterized these charges as lies; and it was he who inflamed the mother."

MUST BE NO OUTBREAK.

Judge Roan said: "You are entirely right in your desire to be protected. Other ladies were excluded from the court room only on account of the nature of the evidence. And I say now that if there is another outbreak from these ladies, they shall be excluded from the court."

"While the jury is yet out," said Mr. Dorsey, "I want to make two motions."

MOVES TO STRIKE EVIDENCE.

Mr. Rosser moved to strike out the questions asked by Solicitor Dorsey of John Ashley Jones, which led to the outbreak by the elder Mrs. Frank in court Wednesday afternoon.

"My brother, Mr. Dorsey, concedes that he can't introduce these specific allegations," said Mr. Rosser, "even in rebuttal, unless we draw them out on cross-examination. Yesterday he said that he wasn't four-flushing and that he intended to prove them. I move to rule out the following questions and answers, and I hope that if you rule with me solicitor will not ask them again. I am going to keep right after him until he asks legal questions. The inquiries themselves were improper and therefore the answers were that also."

Mr. Rosser read the questions and answers about alleged specific acts of improper conduct by Frank toward women named in the questions. Mr. Rosser authorities were cited to sustain his motion. While Mr. Rosser was reading, Frank, the accused, left his accustomed seat and engaged in an earnest conference with Mr. Arnold at the lawyers' table.

Mr. Dorsey answered: "Your honor ruled with me yesterday that these questions were proper and admissible. I may not ask them again. It will be merely a matter of policy on my part if I do not, however." The solicitor cited the penal code to sustain. "It isn't necessary to refer to decisions of all the law on the subject. The Georgia code itself gives that authority."

Solicitor Dorsey also cited other authorities which he was ready to cite.

MOTION OVERRULED.

Judge Roan, however, signified that he was satisfied, and overruled the motion by Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Rosser's second motion proved to be a suggestion to the court. It was that before certain questions are to be asked of witnesses in regard to a particular fact, the jury be retired. Before Judge Roan could remark upon the suggestion, Solicitor Dorsey arose and said: "I agree to that" and the matter was settled.

Then the jury was brought in and Miss Helen K. Curran was called as the first witness of the defense for the day.

MISS CURRAN TESTIFIES.

Miss Curran said she lives at 160 Ashby street, and is a stenographer with a medicine company, and that her father works at Montag Brothers. She said she graduated in June last year, but that her chief that her shorthand teacher was Professor Briscoe. She was examined by Attorney Arnold as follows:

"Before you finished your shorthand course, did you know Mr. Frank?"

"Yes."

"Where did you meet him?"

"I met him at the factory."

"How did you happen to go there?"

"I went there with Professor Briscoe to see about getting a position as stenographer."

"Did you get the position."

"No."

"Do you know why?"

"No. Mr. Frank said he would report to my father whether he could give me the position or not."

"Where were you working on April 26, 1913?"

"At the Bennett Printing company."

"What time did you get off that day?"

"About 12 o'clock."

"Where did you go?"

"I went up town to do some shopping on Whitehall street."

"Did you have an appointment with any one?"

"Yes, I was to meet a friend of mine named Velma Turner."

"Do you remember where you were about 1 o'clock?"

"Yes, I was coming out of Kress', and I noticed it was five minutes after 1 o'clock by Davis & Freman's clock there on Whitehall street."

"Miss Curran, then, the Kress store between Alabama and Hunter streets?"

"Yes."

"Where did you go then?"

"I went to Jacobs' corner at Alabama and Whitehall streets."

"Do you recall seeing Mr. Frank there?"

SAW FRANK AT 1:10.

"No, I didn't see him when I first got there, but after I had been there about five minutes I turned around and saw him standing near the corner."

"What time was it when you saw him, then? Just give us your best judgment."

"I should say it was about ten minutes after 1 o'clock."

"How long did he wait there for his car?"

"I should say until about 1:20 o'clock."

"When was the first time you heard that Mr. Frank was involved in this trouble?"

"About the middle of the next week."

"Did you tell anyone about having seen him there on the corner?"

"Yes, I told my father."

"Do you know whether he told anybody?"

"No, I don't know."

HOOPER CROSS-QUESTIONS.

At this point the cross-examination was taken up by Attorney Hooper.

"The Bennett Printing company is owned by Montag Brothers, isn't it?"

"No, I don't think so."

"You say you came out of Kress' about five minutes after 1 o'clock?"

"Yes."

"You say you stood on the corner a good while at Jacobs'?"

"Yes."

"Yes, I stood there waiting for my friend about fifteen or twenty minutes."

MISS CORINTHIA HALL,
Who testified for the defense at trial of Leo M. Frank.

—Staff Photo by Winn.

"You say you saw Mr. Frank as soon as you got there?"

"No, I think it was about five minutes after I got there."

"You noticed Mr. Frank in that large crowd, did you?"

"It was not crowded where I was standing."

"Refresh your memory, and see if it wasn't packed and jammed there on the corner. The Memorial day parade came along about that time, didn't it?"

"No, the parade came along about 3 o'clock."

"It was crowded then, though, wasn't it?"

"No, there was plenty of room there where I was standing."

"Where were you standing?"

"I was standing on Alabama street a little above Whitehall street, against the building. And there was plenty room where I stood."

"The corner is about the worst place for a crowd that you can find, isn't it, when people are waiting for a parade to come by."

"I wasn't right at the corner. I was away from the corner a little."

"How long were you there?"

"I reckon I was there about five minutes before I saw Mr. Frank."

"You couldn't see Davis & Freeman's clock from there, could you?"

"No, but I saw it when I went back to Kress'."

"How do you know it was five minutes before you saw it?"

"That's my best judgment as to the time."

ASKED ABOUT CROWD.

Mr. Hooper devoted the greater part of his examination to questions about the crowd, which Miss Curran finally admitted was large all around, but that immediately next to her the space was clear and that no one was standing between her and Frank when she saw him. He did not speak to her and she did not speak to him, she said. She assumed he did not recognize her. Asked whom else she saw there, she mentioned the young lady whom she had gone there to meet; her mother, father and brother, and a Mr. Ogletree, whom she had met at business college. She declared that she could not be mistaken in the time. Mr. Hooper asked her if Kress' store, where she said she was just before 1 o'clock, did not close at 12 that day. She was positive it had not, for she was in it at a minute or so after 1, she said. Though the crowd was large, she said, she had no trouble in getting on that corner. She was certain it did not take her more than one or one and a half minutes to walk from the store to the point where she saw Frank. She saw him only the one time, she said, and did not know when he came up or when he left.

SAW FRANK AT 2 P. M.

Mrs. M. G. Michael followed Miss Curran on the stand. She is the wife of a wealthy citizen of Athens. Mrs. Michael said that she is an aunt of Mrs. Lucile Frank. On Memorial day, April 26, she said, she was stopping with her sister, Mrs. C. Wolfsheimer, 387 Washington street, Atlanta. She said that she saw Leo M. Frank about 2 o'clock that day in front of the Wolshemier residence. Asked how she fixed the time, Mrs. Miachel said that her youngest son, David Michael, was going to grand opera that day, and he had just left the house. She was on the front porch, she said, and Frank came by and stood by the steps at the sidewalk and they had a casual conversation. Among the others who were there were her son, Jerome Michael, an attorney of Athens, who has been in the court assisting in the Frank defense; and her nephew, Julian Loeb. Mrs. Wolfshemier, she said, was not on the porch at the time, but came out a little later. She saw Frank go up Washington street to Glenn street, she said, and she saw him when he caught the car there. She saw him again Sunday morning at the Selig residence, she said. That ended the direct examination.

Mrs. Michael was cross-examined by Attorney Hooper. She said that the last time she saw Frank was at 2 o'clock at the corner of Glenn street. She could not tell what car it was he took.

"He came by to inquire how everybody was, you say?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"Yes."

"Was this a usual thing for him to do?"

"Well, he saw that I was in town and he came over to speak to me."

"You say he was collected, and had no scratches or bruises about him?"

"Yes."

In answer to other questions, she said she had arrived in town that morning and had left for her home in Athens Sunday afternoon.

Jerome Michael, her son, was the next witness.

Mr. Michael, answering Mr. Arnold, said that it was between 5 minutes to 2 and 2 o'clock when Frank came to the Wolsheimer home.

WATCH IN HIS HAND.

Asked by Attorney Arnold as to how he fixed the time so closely, he replied: "I was going to call on a young lady that day, and I had my watch in my hand most of the time."

The Wolfsheimer home, said he, is three doors from the corner of Georgia avenue, and he saw Frank approaching the house before Frank got there.

Attorney Hooper asked the witness a few questions on cross-examination, but developed nothing in particular.

MRS. LEVY ON STAND.

Mrs. Albert B. Levy, of 69 East Georgia avenue, was called to the stand. She testified that she lives directly across the street from the Selig home, where Mary Phagan lived. She saw Frank at 1:20 o'clock on Memorial day, she said, as he got off the street car and went to his home. Asked as to how she fixed the time, she replied that she had been dressing and was watching forh er son to come home for lunch. She said that there was a clock on her dresser. The time, therefore, was impressed on her mind. Several days later, she said, after Frank had been arrested, the matter was impressed more firmly on her mind. Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness.

"The cars run a ten-minute schedule there, don't they?"

Mrs. Levy replied that she did not know; she had never paid any attention to the cars. As nearly as she could recollect, they were running frequently on that day on account of it being Memorial day.

"When did you first tell about seeing Frank?"

"During the first few days after the murder?"

"Was there anything said about what time he was accused of committing the crime, when you thought of the time?"

"No."

"Can you tell what time of day anything happens, by your clock? What time did your son get home yesterday, for example?"

"Twelve-thirty," replied the witness.

"What time did he get home the day before?"

"Twelve-twenty. He always comes home then."

"Oh, you're just judging from his custom, then."

"Yes."

"Well, on Memorial day he already had his lunch, hadn't he?"

"No, sir."

Attorney Arnold asked the witness another question. It was in regard to a sick woman whom Mrs. Levy had said she visited that day. Mrs. Levy said the woman is Mrs. J. A. Hirsch, and that she arrived at Mrs. Hirsch's home at 15 minutes to 2 o'clock.

MRS. WOLFSHEIMER CALLED.

The next witness was Mrs. Wolfsheimer, of 387 Washington street. She said she lives in about the third house from the corner of Georgia avenue; that she saw Frank come up on the front steps, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, to the best of her recollection.

She said that when she walked out on the porch Frank was there; and that she was called back into the house after he went up to the corner to catch his car, but that she did not see him board the car.

She testified that he did not appear to be nervous, and that she saw no scratches or bruises on his face. She said she saw him two of three times the next day also, and that she then saw no bruises or scratches on his face.

Mrs. Wolfsheimer was cross-examined by Attorney Hooper.

"Was there anything to call your particular attention to Mr. Frank?"

"Not specially."

"What fixed the time in your mind?"

"My husband hadn't yet come to dinner. We ate dinner at 1:30 and had finished and come out on the porch."

"You were not looking for any marks on his face, were you?"

"No, certainly not," indignantly.

JULIAN LOEB TESTIFIES.

The next witness was Julian Loeb, of 380 Washington street, diagonally across the street from the Wolfsheimer residence.

He testified that he is a cousin of Leo Frank's wife, and that he was on the front porch at the Wolfsheimer house on April 26 when Frank came up on the steps. He said that to the best of his recollection, the time was between 1:50 and 2 o'clock.

He said that Frank invited himself and young Mr. Michael to attend the meeting of the officers of the B'nai B'rith lodge the next morning, which was Sunday. He said that Frank then was the president of the lodge. Attorney Arnold asked what sort of an organization is the B'nai B'rith.

Mr. Loeb started to say that it is a charitable organization, but Attorney Hooper objected on the ground of irrelevancy, and was sustained by the court. The witness testified that he saw Frank leave and go up to Glenn street to the corner, he supposed to catch a car.

He was cross-examined briefly by Mr. Hooper.

"Was there any special reason for you to notice the time?"

"I judge the time by the time I left the office where I am employed."

Miss Rebecca Carson, forelady in the assorting department on the fourth floor of the National Pencil factory, was called. She entered the court room wearing a freshly starched and ironed blue dress and a black hat, and greeted Frank very cordially with a smile.

She testified that she has been employed by the National Pencil company since last April three years ago, and has been forelady in the assorting department for three years, with from thirteen to fifteen girls working under her. She was examined by Attorney Arnold.

"To what extent," he asked, "can you hear the elevator running when you are on the fourth floor and the other machinery in the building is not running?"

The witness answered she remembered noticing the elevator running under these circumstances last Christmas. She said the other machinery in the building was not running at the time, and that she heard the vibration of the elevator motor below the fourth floor, that she saw the ropes move, and that she heard the cables knocking against the sides of the elevator shaft.

She testified further that she got her pay about 2:20 Friday afternoon, April 25 and that she did not come back to the factory on the next day, April 26.

"Did you see Mr. Frank on Memorial day?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"I did."

"Where?"

"In front of Rich's store."

"About what hour?"

"Between 2:20 and 2:25 o'clock."

"What was he doing?"

"He was looking at the parade."

"Did you speak to him?"

"Yes, we both spoke."

"Do you remember seeing him again that afternoon?"

SAW FRANK AT 2:50.

"Yes, about 2:50. I remember the time because I noticed the clock. I was standing in front of Brown & Allen's drug store and looked across the street and saw him go into Jacobs' pharmacy."

On continued direct examination, Miss Carson testified that she returned to the factory Monday morning and saw Frank and Jim Conley. She testified that on Monday morning she asked her mother talked to Jim Conley on the fourth floor.

She testified that Jim Conley brought the saw pencils to the fourth floor, and she asked him where he was on Saturday, and he said he was so drunk he didn't remember.

She said that Snowball (a negro witness who already had testified) was present at the time and when she asked him where he was on Saturday he replied that he could prove where he was.

She testified that Jim Conley went over to her mother's machine and her mother said: "They haven't got you, yet, Jim." And he said: "I have n't done nothing." She testified that her mother said then "But they've got Mr. Frank, and you know he hasn't done anything either. She testified that Jim Conley replied "No, he's as innocent as you, and I know you ain't done nothing."

She testified that her mother then said that in her opinion, when they found the murderer of Mary Phagan, it would be the negro that Mrs. White spoke of having seen downstairs on the first floor Saturday afternoon. She testified that when her mother said this, Jim Conley dropped his broom and walked away.

When Miss Carson commenced to testify as to what her mother said and what Jim Conley said, there was an objection by the state. In reply to the objection attorneys for the defense stated that they were laying a foundation for further testimony, and on this ground the court admitted the questions.

HOOPER TAKES WITNESS.

Attorney Hooper cross-questioned Miss Carson.

"When was it you say Conley made that remark?"

"Monday morning about 8 o'clock."

"Then you went right straight and told your mother?"

"Yes."

"Speaking of this elevator—it really runs very smoothly, compared with other elevators, doesn't it?"

"I never have noticed others especially, but I know that this one makes a noise."

The witness admitted that she could not hear the elevator when the machinery in the factory was running. She also admitted that she remembered hearing it only the one time—Christmas. She also admitted that if the doors were closed, even if the machinery was not running, she might not hear the elevator.

Mr. Hooper questioned the witness about the first time that she claimed to have seen Frank on Memorial day. She said that she was sure of the time because she had looked at the clock on Whitehall street near Kress'. She wasn't sure whether it was Haynes' clock or the Davis & Freeman clock. She explained that she said she saw Frank between 2:20 and 2:25 because it was only a minute or two after she had seen the clock.

She looked at the clock because her sister, who was with her, asked her the time. The witness said she had been working for three years; that her salary is $10 per week. The last time it was raised, said she, was in January.

Asked especially if it had been raised since the tragedy, she indignantly said, "No, indeed." Asked if Frank was a friend of hers, she said, "Yes, in a business way." She said that she had never worked later than 1 o'clock on Saturday afternoons, and did not know whether Jim Conley stayed at the factory, but had heard that some negro stayed to sweep.

"That was just a chance conversation with Conley?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"Yes."

"It was before the blood was found on the office floor?"

"I don't remember when it was found," said the witness.

"So Conley said he was so drunk on Saturday that he didn't know where he was or what he did?"

"Yes."

"He never mentioned to you before that he had been drunk?"

"No."

"Conley was not suspected then, was he?"

"No."

"You didn't think much about the conversation, did you?"

"No, but I told my mother. I tell her everything."

"Then it didn't make an impression?"

"Yes, it did," said the witness.

"When did you tell Darley about it?"

The witness said she didn't know, but before Frank was arrested.

"Whom else did you tell about it?"

TOLD MR. ROSSER.

"I told Mr. Rosser."

"When did you tell him?"

"I don't remember. He came to the factory and called for some girls to tell him what they thought about Conley, and I was one of them."

"Did he know of this conversation before that?"

"I don't know."

"Who else was present?"

"Some other girls, but I don't remember."

"The second time you saw Frank was where?"

"I was at the corner of Alabama and Whitehall and saw him go in Jacobs'."

"What did you do?"

"I was on my way to catch my car then."

"Did you ever see that blood?"

"Well, I've seen blood in the factory," said the witness quickly.

"Well, did you see that spot on the second floor after the murder?"

"I didn't go into the metal room till Tuesday, and I walked through there with Mr. Frank, and I didn't look for the spot."

"Oh, yes. You were talking to Frank about the crime?"

"I only shook hands with him and told him I was glad he was back with us. That was all I said about it."

The witness was excused, and Cohen Loeb, of 380 Washington street, a brother of Julian Loeb, was called to the stand.

ON CAR WITH FRANK.

He testified that on Memorial Day he and Frank rode to town on the car together in the afternoon about 2 o'clock. He boarded a Washington street car at Georgia avenue and took the seat with Frank, who had gotten on at Glenn street. He said that the car does not go down Georgia avenue by Fulton. He got off at Hunter street, he said, in front of the capitol, about 2:10 o'clock. The car was blocked there, and Frank got off just before he did. He said that he noticed no scratches or bruises on Frank, and there was nothing unusual in his demeanor. The witness said he thought Frank had on a brown suit and a derby. Asked whom he saw on the trip to town, he said that while the car was blocked he saw Mr. Arthur Harris and Ike Liebmann pass in an automobile. He said he did not know whether or not Frank saw them.

He said those two were the only people that he recognized. He and Frank sat on the right front side of the car with Frank next to the window.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hooper, the witness saidthat he knows Mr. Harris, (a previous witness for the defense).

"Did you see him there in front of the capitol?"

"I didn't recognize him, but I remember noticing his car."

"Oh yes." Why did you notice his car?"

"It's a dark color."

"There are a thousand other dark machines in town, aren't there?"

"I suppose so."

"What was the exact color?"

"Dark maroon."

"How many passengers car is it?"

"It is a touring car."

"What was the number?"

"I don't know."

FRANK'S STORY UPHELD BY MANY WITNESSES

"Well, how do you know it was his ear?"

"I heard it afterward. And then I remembered noticing the car particularly because it ran in front of the street car and struck against it." The witness said he heard a noise but there was no shock.

Asked if it is not an invariable custom for a street car to stop after any sort of a collision, and get the names of witnesses, Mr. Loeb replied that they do when the collision is serious, but not always. Asked if he had ever been on a street car and seen any accident, however little, except that one, that was not investigated, the witness replied that he had not.

"Come down," said Mr. Hooper.

The next witness, Charles Lee was called. He did not answer and the defense called Henry Smith to the stand. He testified that he has worked for the National Pencil company a little over two years, and had been employed in the metal department about nine months.

LOOKING FOR REWARD.

"Do you know a man named Barrett over there?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"Yes, sir. I work with him."

"Did he ever talk to you about rewards?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did he say?"

"Well, he said there was about $4,-500 reward, and he thought if anybody was to get it he would get first hook at it."

"What did he say about it?"

"He said he found the blood and the hair and he thought he was entitled to some of it."

In answer to other questions, the witness said that Barrett had talked to him six or seven times about this reward. He testified that Barrett had gone through the pantomime of counting out imaginary bills in his hand.

Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness.

"This Barrett is a sensible sort of a man, isn't he?"

Attorney Arnold objected to the question, and Attorney Hooper withdrew it.

In answer to a series of questions by Attorney Hooper, the witness said Barrett would count this imaginary money and laugh. He said the first time Barrett talked about rewards was about a week after the arrests, and that the last time was about three weeks ago.

HARRY LEWIS CALLED.

Charles Lee was called again, but again did not answer. The defense called Harry C. Lewis to the stand. He lives at 56 Underhill avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Lewis said that he is a practicing lawyer, and at one time was assistant to the district attorney in Brooklyn.

He said he knew Frank twelve years; that he had known him when he lived on Lafayette avenue in Brooklyn and later when Frank moved to within two doors of his, the witness', home. He testified that he knows Frank's general character and that it is very good.

Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness, asking him how long ago it was he knew Frank. It was about seven years ago, before Frank came south, he said. he witness was excused, an Herbert Lasher, of Fleischmann, N. C., was called. He replied to a question by Attorney Arnold, that he manages his father's estate nea rthe town. He said that he knew Frank in the class at Cornell, and that they roomed together and ate together for two years. He said that Frank's general character is very good.

Attorney Hooper cross-questioned the witness. "You mean it was very good when he was at Cornell?"

"Yes, he associated with the best class of fellows at the university."

"You were one of them, too, of course?"

"Yes."

In answering the other questions the witness said he kept up a correspondence with Frank for two years after they graduated; and that he also had visited Frank since their graduation.

CHARLES LEE ON STAND.

Charles Lee was called and took the stand. He said he lives on Pine street, employed by the National Pencil factory, and that he lives at 119 Washington street.

Do you remember about an accident to J. E. Duffy in the pencil factory on October 4, 1912?"

"Yes."

"Where did he get hurt?"

"On the eyelet machine."

"Yes, witness tried that one of Duffy's fingers was cut to the bone and that it bled freely; that Duffy went to the office to get his wound dressed, and then was taken to the Atlanta hospital. He said that a lot of blood from Duffy's finger fell on the floor.

"Did he go to the witness' dressing closet in the metal room?"

"Yes."

"Did he bleed, or not, at that place?"

"He bled there."

"Did you see a man named Gilbert, who was hurt there some time, bleeding?"

"No, I didn't see him until after his wound was dressed."

DORSEY EXAMINES.

Solicitor Dorsey cross-examined the witness vigorously.

"How long did you say you've worked at the pencil factory?"

"Two years and four months."

"How long have you lived in Atlanta?"

"All my life."

"What are your dages?"

"Thirty-two and a half cents an hour."

"How long have you been getting that?"

"Only two weeks."

"What did you get before that?"

"Thirty cents an hour."

"That's a pretty good raise, isn't it?"

"Not so much."

"Who gave it to you?"

"Mr. Darley."

"How long did you get this raise, after you told about seeing those men bleed?"

"I never told them about it."

"How did they know that you knew about this blood being on the floor?"

"Well, I signed a statement right after it happened that I witnessed the accident."

The witness testified that in answer to other questions that about two months ago Schiff had the statement in his hand and was looking for blood on the floor where the man got hurt. The witness said Schiff was looking for all the evidence he could get for the defense.

"When was it Gilbert got hurt?"

"Last year some time."

"Where is the eyelet machine?"

"In the metal department."

"What part of the metal department."

"About the middle."

Solicitor Dorsey then had the witness point out the machine on the diagram of the factory.

"In how many places did you see the blood drop?"

"Well, there was a stream of it."

Solicitor Dorsey asked the witness several questions about the size and frequency of the drops of blood. The witness replied that he had paid no particular attention to their size.

"Which one of his hands was cut?"

"Did he stop on his way to the office?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"In front of the dressing room door."

"How far from the water cooler?"

"About three steps."

"Did you speak to him?"

"Yes."

"What was said?"

"He asked me which one of the offices he should go into?"

"How long did he stand there in front of the dressing room?"

"About eight or ten seconds."

"How big a splotch on the floor did the blood make?"

"I didn't notice it."

"Who cleaned up the blood?"

"It wasn't cleaned up then. The floor never was cleaned up except once a week."

"Did you notice the blood spots after that?"

"No."

"Could you go there now and find them?"

"I don't know as I could, exactly."

"Who else besides you saw him get his finger cut?"

"...obody else."

"Did anyone else see him standing there in front of the dressing room?"

"Yes, Ralmey saw him, and one of the girls."

In answer to questions, the witness testified that he has lived on Washington street about a year, that his father is a candy manufacturer, and that they formerly lived on Whitehall street.

"Where else did he stop" referring to the man whose finger was cut.

"Nowhere else except in the office."

"Did you see any blood there in the metal room on April 28?"

"No."

"You didn't go in there at all?"

"Yes, I went in after they had chipped it up."

"How close was that stain that they chipped up to the stain left by the man withh is finger cut?"

"Just a few steps. It might have been just the same spot."

"So you tell us that it was the exact spot, then, do you?"

"No, I'm not so certain."

Toward the close of the cross-examination, Attorney Arnold registered an objection to the manner in which the solicitor was proceeding, and in the exchange of words which followed Attorney Arnold remarked that Solicitor Dorsey didn't examine the witness, but quarreled with him.

SIG MONTAG CALLED.

The next witness called by the defense was Sig Montag. He testified that he has been in Atlanta twenty-five years; that he is in the stationery manufacturing business, and that on April 26 he was treasurer of the National Pencil company. He testified that the pencil company got its mail at the office of Montag Brothers, about two blocks from the National Pencil factory, and that Frank came there every day except Sundays, in the morning about 10 o'clock, to get the mail and discuss the pencil company affairs. He testified that on April 26 Frank came to his office about 10 o'clock; was there approximately an hour, and talked to him, to his stenographer, Miss Hattie Hall, and to Harry Gottheimer.

He testified that prior to about a year ago he, Montag, went to the pencil factory every Saturday afternoon, and that invariably he found Frank in the office at work on the finance sheets.

Mr. Montag testified that attention was directed to the diagram of the pencil factory. He said that this diagram did not show the ground floor except in front.

In answer to questions, he testified that up to January 1 the Clark Woodenware company had nothing to do with that portion of the ground floor.

He testified that the woodenware company had an office on the ground floor at the street front, and that he thought they used the main entrance for shipping goods. At this point the model of the pencil factory was brought in and set on a table in front of the jury. Mr. Montag pointed out the space on the right of the entrance on the ground floor that he had occupied by the office of the woodenware company. He said the pencil factory practically did not use the first floor while it was occupied by the woodenware company, except that its employes entered there.

Mr. Montag testified as to events on Sunday, April 27. He said that his telephone is on the second floor of his home about thirty feet from his bed. He said he did not hear the telephone ring that morning, but that it aroused his wife and she came and waked him.

TELLS OF TRAGEDY.

He said that a man at the other end of the line told him if he could identify the body of a girl who had either died or been killed in the pencil factory, and that he told the man he would not and referred him to Darley. He said that after breakfast Sunday morning Frank came to his home and reported to him the tragedy which had occurred at the pencil factory. The weather that morning was chilly, said he, and the weather on Saturday was cloudy and raw.

"What was Frank's appearance that morning? Was he nervous?"

"He was no more nervous than I was."

"Were you nervous?"

"Yes, sir, I was, very much so. I think I trembled some. My wife also was very nervous."

"Was Mr. Frank nervous?"

"Yes, he was agitated, too."

"Where were you sitting then?"

"We were seated in my front sitting room."

"What opportunity did you have for observing Frank closely?"

"We had plenty of light because there are three large windows in the front sitting room."

"Did you notice any scratches on his face, or any bruises, or did you notice any spots on his clothing?"

"I sat just in front of him, but I didn't notice any of those things."

Mr. Montag continued that he went to the factory Sunday morning, April 27, and that together with Darley and a machinist he made a general examination of the building, including the metal room. He said he saw nothing on the floor of the metal room to attract his attention, and that Darley did not call his attention to anything.

Mr. Montag stated that he often had noticed the white lubricant used in the metal room. He frequently saw where it had been spilled, he said. For eight years prior to the time the pencil factory moved into the building now occupied, that his paint shop had been operated on the second floor of that building. In reply to a question, he said there had been a great many accidents. The injured people were conducted to the office on the second floor, he said.

He first heard that the detectives had Frank at headquarters on Monday, April 28, about 9 a. m.

"You have been associated intimately with Frank in business, haven't you?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Yes."

HE SENT LAWYER.

"Has he a wide or limited acquaintance?"

"A limited acquaintance."

Mr. Dorsey objected, but was overruled.

"Well, because of his limited acquaintance, what did you do?"

"I telephoned for Mr. Herbert Haas, my personal counsel, and also the attorney for thepencil company, and asked him to go to headquarters."

"Did he want to go? And if he did not, why not?"

"He didn't want to go because his wife was expecting a new member of the family."

"Well, what was done?"

"I persuaded Mr. Haas to go, and went around for him with my car."

Over the objection of the state, Attorney Rosser brought from the witness that Haas was refused admittance, and that they then telephoned for him, Mr. Rosser. That was between 10:30 or 11, according to the witness, and in 30 or 40 minutes Mr. Rosser arrived and went upstairs at headquarters.

Judge Roan explained that he allowed this testimony because it showed motive.

In reply to a question, Mr. Montag said that Haas and Detective Black left headquarters with Frank 30 minutes or an hour after the arrival of Mr. Rosser.

EMPLOYED PINKERTONS.

Mr. Montag said that he received weekly financial sheets from Frank, who brought them over himself usually on Sunday morning. The Monday after the tragedy, he said, he didn't receive the financial sheet until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. In answer to another question, he said that after that Schiff called him up and asked him about the employment of the Pinkertons. Mr. Montag said he told them to employ the Pinkertons and to give all the detectives any assistance in their power in getting evidence.

Mr. Rosser asked the witness if he knew of any anticipated raise for Miss Hall, the stenographer at Montag Bros. He said that he did not, as he employed only the heads of departments.

Solicitor Dorsey cross-examined the witness.

"You say that Frank had a limited acquaintance here?"

"Yes."

"Well, he'd been here six years, hadn't he?"

"Just a little more than five," said the witness.

"Didn't he know Mr. Haas here, and all of the attorneys connected with the patent litigation against the American Pencil company?"

"I don't know."

"Isn't he president of the B'nai B'rith?"

"I think so."

"How many members has that organization?"

The witness said he guessed it has between 400 and 500.

"What do you mean by saying that he had a limited acquaintance?"

DIDN'T CALL FOR ATTORNEY.

"I mean that the people around police headquarters probably wouldn't know him."

"Frank didn't ask for an attorney?"

"No."

"Frank didn't ask for the employment of the Pinkertons?"

"I only talked to Schiff about that."

"You saw Frank about 9:30 or 10 o'clock Sunday morning?"

"Yes."

"Why did he come to see you?"

"He wanted to make a report about the tragedy."

"You already knew about it?"

"Yes, but he didn't know that I knew."

"You say he was agitated?"

"Yes."

"Very perceptibly?"

FRANK WAS AGITATED.

"Knowing him as I do, I noticed it. His general appearance was that of nervousness."

"Did he explain his nervousness?"

"Yes. He said that they carried him into a dark room and suddenly flashed on the light, and he saw the girl."

"He said he saw her, did he?"

"Yes, he described her appearance. He said her face was scratched, one eye was discolored, and her mouth was full of sawdust."

At this point, the witness said in replying to one of the solicitor's questions, "Mr. Dorsey, don't twist anything I say."

"He will anyhow," said Mr. Arnold in an audible aside.

ATTORNEYS CLASH.

Both Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey charged each other then and there with improper conduct, and for a minute or two a physical encounter between them in court seemed imminent. The solicitor vehemently demanded that Mr. Arnold's remarks be ruled from the record, and Judge Roan ordered him to go on with the examination of the witness.

"Frank explained his nervousness, did he?" asked the solicitor.

"Well, he said that he had seen."

"Didn't he say anything about having been to police headquarters, nor request that you get him a lawyer?"

"No."

"Well, who made the trade with Haas?"

"There's been no trade."

"Have you contributed or promised anything toward his fee, or has the National Pencil company?"

"No."

"Have the Pinkertons been paid?"

The defense objected. Solicitor Dorsey argued his question, saying, "This is relevant, your honor, to show the attitude of the officials and the National Pencil company generally, and we may make it apparent that there is a reason for the Pinkertons not having been paid. Can't we show that the Pinkerton have asked for their money and have not received a cent?"

Judge Roan allowed the question.

PINKERTONS SEND BILLS.

Mr. Montag replied that the Pinkertons had sent two or three bills but hadn't requested any pay.

"Has Pierce asked you for any money?"

"No."

"Have you received the reports of the Pinkertons?"

"Yes."

Attorney Rosser objected. Judge Roan said, "Mr. Dorsey, I don't how far you intend to go into this." "I am going just as far as you will let me go," said the solicitor. "I want the jury to know that in the room where the stick was found and when the pay envelope was found, and that he kept the finds from the police."

"Well, I'm objecting to all of it," said Mr. Rosser.

Judge Roan ruled, "If your purpose is to show that this witness is biased, you can pursue this line of questioning."

"You got the report of the finding of that stick, didn't you?" asked the solicitor.

"I did."

"And of the finding of the envelope, too?"

"I did."

"You were so much interested in this case that you hired the Pinkertons, and yet you didn't tell the police about these discoveries?"

Attorney Rosser objected and was sustained.

"What did you do about these finds?"

"I gave the reports to Mr. Rosser."

"Did you request Pierce, of the Pinkertons, to keep these discoveries from the police?"

"No, sir."

"How many reports of accidents have you received from the pencil factory?"

"It's impossible for me to tell. There's a small accident about once a month, I think."

Mr. Montag, answering questions, said that he remembered the accident to Gilbert because it was the most serious that ever had occurred in the pencil factory. Either Frank or Schiff told him about it, he said.

"You say Frank carried the financial sheet to you on Monday, April 28?"

"Yes."

"Before that he mailed it, you say?"

"No, sir I didn't say that."

"Sometime in June were you in the pencil factory when some detectives and Mr. Hooper were over these."

"Yes, but I wasn't with them."

"How long after Mary Phagan's death did the insurance people order you to clean up that basement?"

"Within the week, I think."

"Were you in the basement the next day after it was cleaned up?"

"No, sir."

"Do you know where the shellac is kept? You seem to know all about everything at the pencil factory?"

"No, sir. I know it should be kept in a cool place. That's all."

"Did you make any effort to get a horse and buggy on the afternoon of Saturday, April 26?"

"No, sir."

DIDN'T CALL LIVERYMAN.

"Did you call up the residence of W. D. Brown, a liveryman, about 4 o'clock that afternoon?"

"I did not."

"Are there any other Montags in Atlanta?"

"Three of them."

"Who are they?"

"My partners."

"And you didn't authorize anybody to call up W. D. Brown on that afternoon, did you?"

"No, sir."

That concluded the cross-examination. Attorney Rosser questioned the witness in re-direct.

"Isn't it a fact that when you received these reports from the Pinkertons, you understood that the police already had duplicates of them?"

"Yes, sir."

"You don't know, do you, whether or not Frank knew me before that morning when I went down to the jail?"

"I don't know that."

Mr. Montag was excused from the stand.

At the instance of the solicitor, subpoenaes duces tecum were issued to the pencil factory officials and certain insurance officials commanding them to brinf into court papers relative to accidents in the factory.

Court recessed at 12:35 until 2 o'clock.

The Frank Trial—Frost's Magazine.

Court Stirred by Outburst From Leo Frank's Mother

Defense Character Witness Is Used by Solicitor to Get Suggestions Before Jury

Solicitor Mentions Names of Many Persons, Who Will Probably be Put Up In Rebuttal to Attack Frank's Conduct as Related to Women Employes of Factory—Mrs. Rae Frank, Mother of the Accused, Creates a Sensation Shouting at the Solicitor

Court adjourned at 5:40 until 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

The trial of Leo M. Frank took another sensational turn Wednesday afternoon when Solicitor Dorsey began, through his questions to John Ashley Jones, put up as a character witness by the defnese, a vigorous attack upon the character of Frank. The solicitor hurled one sensational question at the witness after the other.

"You've never heard L. T. Coursey and Miss Myrtis Cator tell about Frank walking into the dressing room?" shouted the solicitor.

"You never heard how he tried to put his arms around Miss Myrtis Cator?"

"You never heard about his looking at poor little Gordie Jackson?"

"You didn't hear of what he tried to do to Luia McDonald and Rachel Prater, did you?"

"And you didn't know about Mrs. Pearl Dodson hitting him with a monkey wrench?"

To all of these questions the witness answered in the negative. The solicitor proceeded with others, asking the witness if he had ever talked to Mrs. C. D. Dunnegan and Marian Dunnegan or to Mrs. Wingard, of 45 Mills street.

It is inferred that the solicitor expects to put up the persons mentioned to testify in rebuttal against Frank's good character.

Mr. Dorsey drew from Mr. Jones, who is an insurance agent, the admission that he had written to the grand jury, urging an indictment of Jim Conley. Mr. Jones said he did so because his insurance company had written a policy for Frank and before issuing it had made a thorough investigation of his character and found it to be good.

There was a tense scene in the court room Wednesday afternoon when Solicitor Dorsey, while examining a witness, was interrupted by Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the accused. Mrs. Frank had just asked a character witness, John Ashley Jones, whether she had ever heard that Frank conducted himself improperly in his office, when Mrs. Frank shouted in a voice that was audible all over the court room:

"No, and you didn't either."

Attorney Reuben Arnold, in a kindly voice, admonished Mrs. Frank that if she sat in the court room she must submit to hearing "these vile and slanderous lies." He suggested that she was probably overwrought and would better leave the court for a while. She was assisted from the room and, very much agitated, driven in an automobile to her son's home.

After the solicitor and attorneys for the defense had cited authorities and argued at length, Judge Roan Wednesday afternoon announced that the testimony of witnesses who re-enacted Jim Conley's story in an effort to develop the time required to take part in the conversations and movements described by Conley, would be admitted. Both sides had argued strenuously on the point evidently considering it of much importance. Judge Roan stated that he was not entirely satisfied, but that he would give the defendant the benefit of any reasonable doubt.

Lemmie Quinn resumed the stand after the judge announced his decision and was severely cross-questioned by the solicitor.

Leo M. Frank spent the noon recess of court, after he had eaten lunch in a room adjoining the scene of the trial, chatting with the three out-of-town friends whose testimony Wednesday morning in his behalf as a man of good character had put that point in issue. They were Frank Lane, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Philip Nash, of New Jersey, and Richard A. Knight, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Evidently the mother of the accused knew them, too, for she talked with them cordially and introduced to them Atlanta friends of Frank who called.

The discussion as to the admissibility of the testimony regarding the time test made at the factory upon Jim Conley's story was resumed when court convened at 2 o'clock, the jury being left out of court meanwhile. Lawyers for both sides cited their authorities for which Judge Roan had asked.

Judge Roan said that he wanted to hear what there was to write on the subject introduced on which to base a time comparison.

Attorney Rosser, arguing for the defense, contended that there did exist a reasonable basis of comparison—reasonable because no two things are identical, and the jury is competent to reasonably possible to approximate what Conley says he did and said that day at the factory.

ROSSER CITES AUTHORITIES.

Mr. Rosser cited a number of authorities, principally from damage suits, to sustain his contention that a re-enactment of a witness' story is reasonable to test it. He cited one decision, calling attention to fact that before recess Mr. Dorsey had challenged him to find "one Georgia authority" to uphold his side, wherein the law thereof which the solicitor is a member carried to the higher courts in an effort to get a similar evidence before a jury. He said the defense was offering no new doctrine in the court. Similar evidence is admitted constantly in damage suits, said he. He digressed to declare that it is a profound mistake of the law which permits the introduction of testimony whose veracity the courts have reason to doubt. Such evidence, said he, never should be allowed to get to a jury, in the first place. The court should stamp its denial of character that is "phony" as is unmanly possible the story related by Conley as to what he said and did and as to what Frank said and did.

Solicitor Dorsey followed Mr. Rosser. He discussed the case of the Atlanta and West Point railway against Hunter, which was the authority cited by Attorney Rosser. The solicitor contended that in this case the testimony was admitted because it was an expert witness. The specific question in that case was "How quick can a locomotive be stopped on a track?" Solicitor Dorsey contended that inasmuch as the engineer knew more about the stopping of a locomotive and was in a sense an expert, he was allowed to testify. He was more competent to judge than the jurors. In the present instance, he declared, the jurors were just as competent to judge as Dr. Owen or any other witness. "The admission of this opinion is fraught with danger," said he. He cited an authority to the effect that experts can testify in relation to a particular art, science or profession, because from their experience they are fitted to know more of the subject under discussion than the jury, which is composed of laymen.

Judge Roan interrupted. "I agree with you, Mr. Dorsey, that no opinion should be admitted. As I understand it, however, Dr. Owen is not called upon to give an opinion, but to tell the jury of the facts about how long it took to do a certain thing. It is this point that I want to hear authorities on."

"I won't call it an opinion, then," said the solicitor. He cited an authority, and argued that it showed the evidence is hearsay and irrelevant. He said a man goes to the pencil factory and enacts a story. That specific thing, said he, is no kin to this case. "It is too ridiculous for any court anywhere to consider as competent evidence," he declared, "It would be impossible for men who went over there and could come with a watch timing them, to re-enact the hiding of the body, to reproduce the thing exactly because they were not acting in the heat of emotion. It is the duty of the jury to draw conclusions, and not of the witness."

Mrs. Coleman, the mother of the murdered girl, was sitting within a few feet of the solicitor's table. When the solicitor reached the point about the carrying of the body the mother buried her face in her handkerchief and sobbed quietly.

Attorney Arnold followed Solicitor Dorsey. He said that all through this case, almost unconsciously, both the defense and the prosecution and the court, had acted on the proposition that evidence of this sort is admissible. He said, for instance, that both sides had asked the policemen if they could see the body from the point in the basement where the night watchman claimed to have been sitting when the latter saw it.

Judge Roan said he did not care to have any further argument along that line. He asked if the testimony by Dr. Owens would be confined to the time which the jury could make a comparison of the time required to enact the story told by Jim Conley.

Attorney Arnold reviewed briefly what the defense proposed to show by Dr. Owens' testimony. He said they had taken from the record of Jim Conley's testimony every word and every movement which he claimed took place in the factory, both on his part and the part of Frank, and had staged the re-enactment of those words and movements as exactly as was humanly possible to do.

RULES WITH DEFENSE.

Judge Roan, in ruling, said he was not sure about the question, but that he would follow the rule and give the benefit of every reasonable doubt.

QUINN RESUMES STAND.

Lemmie Quinn, foreman of the metal room, was recalled to the stand. Mr. Arnold concluded the examination by asking the witness if he still is employed by the National Pencil factory. The witness answered "Yes."

Solicitor Dorsey began the cross-examination.

"When was it these men bled on the floor of the metal room?"

"About a year ago."

"What were their names?"

"I remember C. D. Gilbert, who lives on Jones street. I don't remember the other's name."

"The blood at the water cooler didn't come from Gilbert, did it?"

"I don't know."

"Where did he bleed most"

"In front of the machine."

"You knew that was blood, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"How long did it stay there?"

"It might be there yet."

"When did you notice it last?"

"I don't remember well. It was a long time ago."

"You noticed the spots on the floor near the dressing room on Monday afternoon, didn't you?"

"Yes. It looked like blood."

"What is the difference between those spots and the spots made by Gilbert bleeding?"

"The spots by the dressing room were darker."

"Could gasoline have caused that?"

"I don't know."

"There are only four girls who work on the second floor, are there?"

"Only four in my department. There are about ten others in the polishing room."

"Where were you at noon, April 26?"

"I don't remember."

"When you talked with Officer Payne, with Detective Starnes and Black, and other officers, you told them that you were not around the factory Saturday, didn't you?"

"No."

"Is it true that Frank was the first person you mentioned it to?"

"No."

"You said you reminded Frank of your visit. Tell us how you reminded him."

WHAT HE TOLD FRANK.

"I told him I had been at the factory, and he said he knew I had, but didn't remember the time."

"When was that?"

"On Tuesday after the murder."

"You were with the police off and on all day Monday, were you not?"

"I was with them part of the time."

"Did you tell any of the officers that you were at the factory before you talked with Frank?"

"No."

"How are you so positive about the time?"

"I looked at my watch when I left home, and at the clock at the factory."

"Didn't you say at the coroner's inquest that your wife had to remind you about the time?"

"No. They had been questioning me about how I spent my time, and I told how much time it required from that I had been to Wolfsheimer's market."

"Could you have been at the factory as early as 12:15?"

"I don't think I could."

"How long were you at the Busy Bee?"

"I don't remember."

"What time was it then?"

"I don't know."

"What did you say to the two girls?"

"I asked Miss Freeman if her mother was mad at her for running off and getting married."

"What did you say to Officer Payne?"

"I don't remember having any direct talk with Payne."

ADMITS CONVERSATION.

"Didn't you say at the coroner's inquest that you had been into a Greek stand Sunday, and Payne and the Greek were talking about the murder, and you said, 'What! another Jack the Ripper?' And Payne said, 'No, a white girl's been murdered at the pencil factory.' And didn't you say 'Who was it?' And didn't Payne say 'She worked next to Boots Rogers' sister-in-law?' And didn't you say, 'Why, it must be Helen Ferguson?' And then the Greek said, 'No, it was Mary?'"

"Yes, that's about the way of it," said the witness.

"When you talked with Frank, didn't he tell you not to mention your visit till he had talked with the lawyer?"

"No; he said he would mention it to his lawyer."

"Didn't you tell him that you didn't like to be brought into it, but would let it be known if it would help him? And then didn't he tell you to call the police?"

"No; I told him to mention it if he wanted to."

"You were willing to do what he wanted you to do?"

"It was up to him to mention it if he wanted to."

"But you didn't tell it to the police until after he had talked to his lawyer?"

"The police didn't get hold of it until Saturday, but they could have if they had asked me."

"You talked to Barrett about the crime before the coroner's inquest, did you not?"

"Yes."

"And you two were together every day?"

"He works in my department."

"And yet you didn't tell him anything about being at the factory before the inquest?"

"I don't know that I've mentioned it to him yet," said Quinn.

"Where is Miss Jefferson?"

"I think she is at the factory."

"You think?" said Mr. Dorsey.

"She was there yesterday," replied the witness.

"It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the followin? Saturday before you told Chief Lanford or any of the police about being in the factory on Saturday, April 26, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

HADN'T TOLD OFFICERS.

"You had never spoken to the officers about it before, had you?"

"No."

"And you spoke to Frank about it Tuesday?"

"Yes."

"When was it Frank told you his lawyers had advised him to mention it at the coroner's inquest?"

"I think it was Tuesday afternoon."

"Didn't you say before the coroner's jury that Frank said he was going to mention it if it was favorable to him?"

"I'm not cerain I said 'favorable.'"

"When you made a statement to the police on May 5, didn't you say you were in the factory between 12 and 12:20?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you say that that was as accurate as you could put it?"

"Yes, it was—then."

"Didn't you say in answer to a direct question that you couldn't say exactly what time it was?"

"Yes."

"You don't mean to change your statement that it was between 12 and 12:20, do you?"

"It might hav ebeen between 12:20 and 12:25."

"Then, how is it that you said on May 5 that it was between 12 and 12:20?"

"Then I hadn't reckoned the time as I have now."

"Didn't I take you over every place you went, step by step, after you left home until you got back there?"

"No; you tried to, but I forgot part of it."

The solicitor then read several questions and answers from a statement made to him by Lemmie Quinn on May 5 admitting all of this.

The solicitor then questioned the witness about the back stairway.

"How far is the back stairway, leading from the office floor to the fourth floor, fastened?"

"With a bar."

"What is the door kept fastened for?"

"In order to keep people from coming down that stairway on pay day and checking out and getting their money before it is ready."

"This door is always kept closed, is it not?"

"No, sir."

SOLICITOR PRODUCES STATEMENT.

Solicitor Dorsey said, "All right, Quinn."

The solicitor produced another statement. On May 12, in the presence of several detectives, Sevier Gartner and myself, didn't you make the statement that the bar replaced a broken lock on this door, and that it was customarily kept closed?"

"Yes, I made that statement."

"Why do you tell the jury now, then, that it was not customarily kept closed?"

"I was referring to pay day in that statement."

HOW HE FIGURED IT.

"What has come into your life or your mind that you can now say that you were at the factory between 12:20 and 12:25 on Saturday, April 26, when you said on May 5 and May 12 and before the coroner's jury that it was between 12 and 12:20 when you were there?"

"I reckoned the time from when I left home and the time I got to the pool room. When I made the statement I didn't think of visiting Wolfsheimer's store. That made fifteen minutes' difference."

That concluded the cross-examination, and Attorney Arnold asked the witness a few more questions.

"When the detectives were questioning you on May 5 you overlooked the visit to Wolfsheimer's, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Who called your attention to it?"

"My wife."

"Didn't you tell your father Tuesday about having been in the pencil factory?"

There was objection from the solicitor, but after the question had been reworded so as to make it not leading Judge Roan allowed it.

The witness answered that he had told his father about ot on Tuesday.

"Did Frank ever ask you not to tell the detectives of your visit?"

"No, sir."

"If they had asked you would you have told them?"

"Yes."

OSCAR PAPPENHEIMER CALLED.

Oscar Pappenheimer was the next witness examined.

He testified that he is a furniture manufacturer and owns stock which he bought from Frank ages in the National Pencil company. He testified that a week or so after he bought his stock he began to get weekly statements of business from the pencil company. He said that up to the time the Sunday distribution of mail was discontinued he invariably got a statement in his mail box at the postoffice every Sunday morning. He said that after the distribution of mail on Sunday was discontinued, he got the statement invariably in the Monday morning delivery from the pencil company. He said that up to the time the statements were tendered as evidence by Attorney Arnold.

Solicitor Dorsey objected to them on the ground that they were irrelevant and had no bearing on the case, but Judge Roan admitted them.

TESTIFIES ABOUT CHARACTER.

John Ashley Jones, an insurance agent, was the next witness. He testified that he had known Mr. Frank for one year and eight months. He testified that he knew his general character to be good. He then was cross-examined by Solicitor Dorsey as follows:

"You are in the insurance business?"

"Yes, sir; I am a resident agent."

"You live out on Fourteenth street, don't you?"

"Yes."

Solicitor Dorsey then asked the witness if he had talked with girls employed with the working girls at the factory, and the witness said he did not. The solicitor asked the witness on what he based his opinion of Mr. Frank's character.

"About five years ago Mr. Frank took out a policy with my company in New York. As usual with life insurance companies, we got a thorough report on him both morally and physically, and the fact that he stood up well in this report is proved by his having been granted a standard policy.

"After he came to Atlanta the policy was sent to my office for some Saturday afternoon and he would go over the whole matter with me thoroughly. I went, found Mrs. Frank there with him, was introduced to her, he made out the application for a renewal and again by our agents he was thoroughly investigated. He was passed on physically, and we got a very good report indeed on him."

"Then you didn't hear that he took girls in his lap down there at the factory?"

ARNOLD ENTERS PROTEST.

Attorney Arnold jumped to his feet and interrupted the solicitor with a bitter objection.

"Your honor," he exclaimed, "this is outrageous! We are not trying this man on every vile and slanderous lie that has been circulated against him since April 26. We are undertaking to show his character on April 26 and previous to that time. Every long-tongued, lying, crack-brained idiot that has circulated lies against him since this crime was committed is to be believed, then we have no character to begin with at all."

In reply to this Solicitor Dorsey said, "Your honor, I am not four-flushing one bit. I propose to introduce a witness who will testify that this witness has been arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mr. Frank to which I have just alluded."

No sooner had Solicitor Dorsey made this statement than Attorney Arnold was on his feet again.

THREATENS MISTRIAL.

"Your honor, we cannot and will not submit to any such outrageous statements on the part of the solicitor. He knows that he cannot prove what he is saying. If he makes another such statement as that we will then and there move for a mistrial."

Solicitor Dorsey continued the examination of the witness.

"You never heard that Frank went to Druid Hills with a little girl, did you?"

"No."

"You and the people up there at your office have been very active in this case. Have you not written a letter to the grand jury urging them to indict Jim Conley, didn't you, signed by several of the men there in your office?"

Solicitor Dorsey produced the letter, and in reading the signatures called the name of the witness, John Ashley Jones, and the witness admitted that he had signed the letter.

"Why did you send this letter?" demanded the solicitor?"

"We thought that having had an especially good opportunity to examine into the character of Frank that we should that having satisfied ourselves that he was a man of good character, it was no more than right that we should take this step and do what we could for him."

"Did any one speak to you about writing this letter?"

"No, no one except Mr. Cooney. I think he was the man who conceived the idea, and the only man who spoke to me about it at all."

"Didn't you hear, about twelve months ago, that Frank played with little girls in his office?"

FRANK'S MOTHER INTERRUPTS.

On hearing this question, Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the accused, turned in her seat beside Frank and faced the solicitor.

"No, nor you either!" she shrieked, her face flushed and her eyes flashing.

Only the prompt and determined work of the deputies prevented the court being thrown into an uproar.

Attorney Arnold, in a sympathetic voice, said, "Mrs. Frank, if you stay in the court room, I'm afraid you'll have to hear these vile, slanderous lies, and I would suggest that if you have reached the limit of your patience you might retire for a little while."

Mrs. Frank arose and was escorted through the crowded court room to the door by Attorney Herbert Haas and some other men of the Frank party.

Mrs. Lucile Frank showed considerable emotion for the first time since her husband's trial began, and the face of the accused man flushed when the solicitor hurled his sensational question at the witness.

"Do you know Tom Blackstock?" asked the solicitor.

"No."

HURLS SENSATIONAL QUESTIONS.

"Did you ever talk with L. T. Coursey or Miss Myrtis Cator? You never heard any of them say that Frank would walk into the dressing room without offering any explanation for his intrusion?"

"No."

"You didn't hear of him trying to put his arm around Miss Myrtis Cator and trying to shut the door just before the factory closed one afternoon?"

"No."

"You didn't hear how he stood and looked a poor little Gordie Jackson? You didn't hear how it was the talk of the factory?"

"No."

"You didn't hear what he tried to do to Lula McDonald and Rachel Prater?"

"No."

"You didn't hear what he said to Mrs. Pearl Dodson when he stood talking to her and her daughter with money in his hand, and you didn't hear how she hit him with a monkey wrench?"

"No."

"You didn't talk to Mrs. C. D. Dunnegan and Miss Marian Dunnegan about him?"

"No."

"You didn't hear how he was accustomed to slap girls and how he had nude pictures in his office? You did not talk to Mrs. Wingard, of 45 Mills street, about him, did you?"

"No."

The solicitor finished his examination suddenly at this point and sat down, silence falling over the court.

Attorney Arnold arose and called for the letter written by the witness and his business associates to the grand jury. The solicitor walked over to Mr. Arnold and whispered to him and then said to the court, "Your honor, we are informed that Daisy Hopkins is about to leave. We want her held here."

"We don't want her going to leave, but we are through with her. You'll have to keep her yourself."

The court instructed Deputy Miner to order the witness to remain within the jurisdiction of the court until called.

Mr. Arnold then over the objection of the solicitor, read the letter to the jury, addressed to W. D. Beattie, signed by the witness, by Robert L. Cooney and others, asking the grand jury to investigate Jim Conley's connection with the murder case.

With this Mr. Arnold concluded, and Mr. Dorsey resumed the questioning of the witness, and started to ask the witness whether or not the grand jury acted on his suggestion.

Mr. Arnold anticipated the question and said to the court: "We object to anything about what the grand jury did or did not do. It may be that my friend here, with his official position as solicitor general, acting as he has in this case, has the grand jury under his thumb and prevented an indictment of this negro."

The objection of the defense was sustained, and the witness was dismissed, leaving Solicitor Dorsey smiling.

DR. OWENS TAKES STAND.

Dr. William Owens was called to the stand.

Dr. Owens testified that he was with Mr. Walker and others when they went through an enactment of Jim Conley's story about moving the body of Mary Phagan. With the assistance of Mr. Arnold, he showed on the diagram the different points of interest.

"You have followed out the directions in this paper, which has been read to the court, did you not?"

"Yes."

"Leave out the eight minutes in the wardrobe and the time it took to write the notes. How long were you in going through this performance?"

"Eighteen and a half minutes. We went through the scenes exactly as laid down in this paper as quickly as we possibly could, at the same time following the instructions."

"Now add the eight minutes in the wardrobe, and ten minutes for the writing of the notes, and how much time would that make for the whole business?"

"Thirty-six and a half minutes."

HOOPER CROSS-EXAMINES.

Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness.

"Where did you start this performance?" he inquired.

"First we made an inspection trip through the basement and saw the place where they told us the body was found."

"Where did you start your calculating?"

"At the top of the stairs."

"And you read out the directions, did you?"

"No, I held a watch in my hand and Mr. Haas and Mr. Wilson read the paper."

"Oh," remarked Mr. Hooper, showing mild surprise. "Mr. Haas was with you?"

"Yes."

"Who played the part of Conley?"

"Mr. Brandt took the part of Conley."

The witness answered that "the others followed him and gave directions, except sometimes when the directions were anticipated."

"Then if a man had been doing this of his own volition, the time would have been shorter?"

"Somewhat shorter, though not much," said the witness.

"And you didn't have the men in the scenario take roles very much excited and anticipating some one catching them, did you?"

"No."

"You went through it slowly and deliberately, did you?"

"I wouldn't say so."

"Tell us about tying up the body."

"Well, Mr. Brandt made motions like he was tying it up."

"Did he let the body fall?"

"Oh, no," said the witness.

"He didn't have to jump out of the way of the blood, did he?" inquired Mr. Hooper.

"No."

"The knots didn't come untied, did they?" pursued Mr. Hooper.

"No."

"You went into an explanation that it was a 110-pound sack, or one supposed to weigh that, which they used in the scenario. There was sawdust in the sack, he said.

"There was no cord around its neck, choking it to death, was there?"

"Oh, no," said the witness.

The witness declared that the actors of the scenario lost only five or ten seconds time in the whole operation and that was a point where the schedule directed a pause. The witness said they dragged the sack back from the elevator to the point in the basement where the body was found. The witness described the floor of the basement as soft black dirt.

"Then it wouldn't hurt a body to drag it over that floor?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"Not except at the boiler, where there are some cinders packed down," said the witness.

Mr. Hooper went into minute detail in questioning the witness about the scenario which he and the others had enacted, in an apparent endeavor to show its unreliability from all angles. To the most of the questions, Dr. Owen replied that the movements were made as quickly as was reasonably possible. Fleming, said he, enacted the part of Frank.

BRANDT'S IDENTITY.

In answer to Attorney Hooper's questions, Dr. Owens said that he did not know what the occupation of Brandt is, although he has been associated with Brandt for some ten or twelve years. He said that Fleming is a contractor.

Attorney Hooper brought out by his questioning that Mr. Fleming helped Brandt to carry the pseudo body along the second floor, letting the ears at the corner of the sack represent Mary Phagan's feet and her arms. He said that Brandt, in the character of Conley, found just as the negro did, that it was impossible to carry the body on his arm.

There was laughter in court when it was developed from the witness that Mr. Haas was playing the reading part of Frank, whereas Mr. Brandt had the more difficult one of Conley with his hard physical work. The witness testified that another man named Wilson took part in the action. Dr. Owens said he thinks Wilson works at the Atlanta Paper company.

"That's Mr. Haas' company, isn't it?" inquired Mr. Hooper.

The witness replied that he did not know. He said that Mr. Fleming is a contractor.

After the body was put on the elevator, Herbert Schiff pulled the rope, the witness said.

"What character was Mr. Schiff playing in the scenario?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"He just pulled the elevator rope. He was the elevator boy," said the witness. The witness told about one of them ascending on the elevator, he holding a watch all the time, and about the sack being dragged back to where it was to be discovered.

"You had to stop in the basement to read the directions, didn't you?"

"Yes. I do recall that we had to stop."

"What did you do, Mr. Owens, when you were through with them by?"

"There was an electric light down there, and a gas jet was lit."

The witness was then examined in considerable detail as to just where he stood while he read the directions.

"When you stopped to read the directions, the procession stopped, too, didn't it?"

"No; I went on ahead myself and read the directions."

"How many men went down into the basement?"

"I believe there were five in all."

"When you got down in front of the boiler, was the body being carried or dragged?"

"Now let me see I don't believe I recall."

CARRYING OUT SCHEME.

"You were trying to carry out their scheme, were you?"

"Yes, It was furnished to me as a copy of the testimony Conley gave here in court."

"How was the body carried after you left the elevator? Was it carried bodily or was it dragged?"

"I don't believe I can recall exactly although I know it was carried one time and dragged the other time, although I can't remember whether it was dragged or carried first."

"How was the body carried the time you did carry it, doctor?"

"It was carried in 'Conley's' arms across his abdomen." (Laughter in court.) "I should say the time was about the same in both cases, when it was carried and when it was dragged."

"Do you think you could drag the body as fast as you could carry it, doctor?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Really, now, doctor, you can't remember whether the body was dragged either time, can you?"

"Yes, I am positive it was dragged one time."

"What did Conley do then, after he had disposed of the body?"

WHICH FRANK?

"He wiped his hands and came away."

"Which one of the 'Franks' was it that hit up against 'Conley?'"

"I don't remember which 'Frank' it was. It was dark in the elevator."

"Did you stop below the second floor?"

"Yes, we stopped just below the second floor and 'Frank'—I think he was being played by Haas this time—fell with the weight of both cases."

Mr. Hooper continued the cross-examination of the witness with the evident intention of showing that the witness seriously, but of showing up the performance as a farce.

The witness was not certain which was the office of Frank and Conley when they first entered or the one they entered later. One of the passages in the scenario contained a statement, "All of a sudden Mr. Frank looked out the door and exclaimed." Mr. Hooper laid comical stress on this in the numerous questions that he put to the witness about it.

DIDN'T LIGHT CIGARETTE.

The witness admitted that they did not have other people to take other parts in Conley's story. Mr. Hooper brought out from the witness each transition of "Frank" from Haas (the reading Frank) to Fleming (the acting Frank). Mr. Hooper caused the witness to admit that the "Conley" of the performance did not get into the wardrobe because he was too big. Mr. Hooper stressed laughingly the admission that "Conley" forgot to light the cigarette at the proper place in the proceeding. Dr. Owens admitted that on one or two occasions several pauses were made, but that they were short—from five to ten seconds, he said.

Handing a letter to Dr. Owens which had been received by the foreman of the grand jury, Attorney Hooper asked him if he could identify it as a letter which he had sent. The witness said yes, that he had written it.

"At whose instance?" asked Attorney Hooper.

"Well, partly at the instance of Mr. Leonard Haas and partly at my own."

Attorney Hooper asked the witness why he had sent it.

Dr. Owens replied that the attitude of the people of Atlanta since the arrest of Frank has been one of prejudice, and that shortly after Frank's arrest he, the witness, met Leonard Haas on the street and that Haas "said to me—"

Attorney Hooper interrupted, admonishing the witness that he could not detail a conversation. Attorney Arnold contended that the conversation was pertinent and should be heard. Judge Roan ruled with Attorney Hooper.

Attorney Hooper picked up another letter (the third which had been shown to the witness since he came upon the stand) and asked the witness whose name was signed to that.

"A. F. Fleming," replied the witness.

"Is he the Fleming who helped you stage this play at the pencil factory?" asked Attorney Hooper.

"I don't know," said the witness.

Attorney Hooper asked: "Well, you didn't know any other A. F. Fleming, do you?"

The witness replied, "no."

Attorney Arnold took the witness on re-direct examination. He took from the solicitor the first of the two letters shown together to the witness.

AS A MATTER OF CONSCIENCE.

"Why did you write this, Dr. Owens?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Attorney Arnold then read the letter. It was to the effect that at the time of writing Dr. Owens believed that out of the people of Atlanta he found very few who believed in the guilt of Leo M. Frank. The letter said that in the writing of " Dr. Owens was discharging what he regarded as his duty, which weighed heavily on his conscience and which he could not forego doing.

"When you went through this pantomime, you didn't stop to laugh like my friend Hooper, did you?"

"No, sir."

It was given as Conley's testimony, and if it was absurd it was not your fault was it?"

"No, sir."

Attorney Hooper asked: "Who dictated this letter?"

"I did," replied the witness. He added that he had submitted it to a prominent local jurist before sending it, to see if he had a legal and a moral right to do so.

The witness was excused. Judge Roan announced that he would like to have another witness called, although the hour was 5:40. The name of Charles Lee was called as the defense' next witness, but its owner was not to be found, nor was any other witness there. Some mysterious person had gone upstairs and excused the whole flock.

"I had a whole carload of witnesses up there, your honor," said Mr. Arnold, "a hundred of them. But they're gone now."

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Thursday.

PARK COMMITTEE TO HEAR OF RECREATION

Expert on Play Grounds to Explain Utility of Recreation Secretary

T. S. Settle, southern field secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, addressed a special committee of the park board at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon on the subject of establishing in Atlanta a department of recreation or a recreation secretary.

Mr. Settle has been in the city several days, looking over the possibilities here, and his talk to the park board outlines the advantages to be derived from developing and systematizing the recreation facilities of the city.

W. P. Anderson, Frank Reynolds and L. C. Green, who form the committee, will report to the park board on the question at its next meeting.

"Such a movement would result in untold good to the city," said Mr. Settle, who has recently drafted an ordinance creating a department of recreation in Birmingham, the southern headquarters of the playground association.

The duties of a recreation secretary, as tentatively outlined by the playground association's representative, would be to create, organize, conduct and supervise public playgrounds, public baths, evening recreation centers, concerts, holiday celebrations and all matters pertaining to the recreational welfare of the people. He would co-operate with the board of education, the library board, the park board and all other organizations interested in the wellbeing of the public, and would make a thorough study of the recreational needs of the city, its facilities, and the best manner of utilizing such facilities.

Richmond, Norfolk, Macon, Chattanooga, New York, St. Louis and many other cities have such departments of recreation, and the results obtained therefrom have more than justified the movement.

GOVERNOR WILL DELAY JUDGE'S APPOINTMENT

Atlanta Lawyers Ask Slaton to Delay Action in Filling New Position

A committee of the Atlanta Bar association called on Governor John M. Slaton Thursday and asked that he delay action on the appointment to fill the recently created judgeship in this circuit. Governor Slaton granted the request, saying he would take no action within the next two weeks.

The members of the committee were E. V. Carter, James W. Austin, W. H. Terrell, Lee M. Jordan, Hudson Moore, Eugene Dodd, W. Carroll Latimer, Thomas H. Goodwin, Paul E. Johnson, Samuel D. Hewlett, Harrison Jones, John A. Hynds, Shepard Bryan and H. N. Randolph, chairman.

"OLD BILL" MINER DYING; HIS SHACKLES OFF NOW READY FOR LAST ESCAPE

of his ten commandments was that he should not lie.

The others were:

Change the laws, because they are unjust.

Never say a bad thing about a man when you can say a good one.

Give a fellow money when he needs it. Keep every man's good will.

Never take what belongs to another man. Rob only corporations.

Never fail to help a woman.

See something of the world.

Take time off for reading.

And don't squeal.

WHEN HIS SPIRIT BROKE.

It wasn't until "Bill" took to his bed that he agreed that the chains upon his anklets should be taken off. And then it seemed as though his spirit broke completely, and as though he lost the will to live.

The chains seemed to mean that he still had a chance at liberty, that he might yet find the way to freedom—to the old life, to the open road and adventures up and down the world.

The chains were a symbol to Bill. Now they are gone and Bill, according to what the prison commission has heard, is dying.

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE.

Information sent to the commission by the warden is:

"Old Bill Miner" is critically ill with gastritis, and physicians do not think he will live to see the end of this week. He is likely to die at any moment, and in my opinion he has only three or four days to live at the longest."

NEVER ROBBED A MAN.

"Bill" says that in all he has stolen $500,000, but that never did he take a penny from an individual. He robbed only corporations.

On a farm in Kentucky, a place of green meadows, Old Bill Miner first saw the light of day. But the name at his christening wasn't "Bill" and "Miner" is as much an alias. He says that neither the police nor any of his pals know his real name, and he intends that they never shall.

Well, the years passed without any incident to speak of, until a night in September when he eased from a school window, slipped across the school grounds, and stole the first part of that half a million dollars.

WEARING THE GRAY.

"It's a job I've never done time for," says Bill. "It started me. That's enough said about it. With the money in my trousers I started west, for the mining camps. In '61 I found myself in California with a hankering for home, and I set out east. But in '64 I was back in Kansas. I wasn't robbing coaches, though, or looking for a 'home stake.' I was riding dispatches for General Wright and wearing a gray uniform. I fought for the south in that guerrilla warfare we had in the west and I fought the best I knew.

"Then the Indian wars came on and I took a hand in them. After that I went back to mining. Why, do you believe it, I was in Sacramento when C. P. Huntington laid the first railway line in that country. I went up into the Klondike hunting gold, I shipped to South America, I went to Africa. There isn't a mining camp in the world I haven't visited. But most of the gold I dug was from coaches and express trains.

"In Africa I started up the Nile, meaning to go all the way to the Red sea. But I stopped short of that, turned about and headed for China.

"In Africa I toured, in Europe I did a few jobs to keep me in pocket money, and at Monte Carlo I was cleaned out. I dropped $5,000 there in one lump.

"Money looked scarce, and I set out for home. I stopped over in Canada, and got a life sentence for one hold-up. After four months I broke jail, and started working south.

"In time I reached here and it looks as though here I'm to stay till the end of my days. At seventy, a twenty-year sentence is pretty long, isn't it? And, yet, I've never done a man an injury. I've robbed none but the corporations, and they had too much as it was.

"I've practiced Socialism, not robbery. I wish the governor could see that."

ASA CANDLER RETURNING THOROUGHLY OPTIMISTIC

Declares Business Conditions Will Improve Steadily—Had Fine Trip Abroad

Asa G. Candler returned Wednesday afternoon from a two months' trip in Europe, and on Thursday was back in harness again in his office in the Candler building. He arrived in New York Sunday, but said that he took little time there to see anybody, and so didn't have much chance to discuss business conditions up there.

Mr. Candler said that Europe wasn't as well off in a business way as America, and that they acknowledge it over there. War, he said, had been keeping things upset across the water, but Mr. Candler thought that matters would improve now that peace had been declared in the Balkans.

Mr. Candler was impressed by the fact that most of the people traveling in Europe are American tourists, who spend a lot of money over there. Mr. Candler said he had had a delightful trip and had enjoyed it immensely.

Speaking of business conditions, he thought they would steadily improve.

"We think money is high now, but it is only relatively so," said Mr. Candler. "You must remember that money has been remarkably cheap for the past four or five years. Now the rates are not actually so high, but they seem so by contrast."

He added that he had no building plans to announce, and, in fact, was going through a stack of accumulated business correspondence. He felt very much encouraged over the fine crop outlook, and saw every indication of an improvement in general conditions.

general assembly that from and after the passage of this act, in all cases where the custody of any minor child or children is involved between the parents there shall be no prima facie right to the custody of such child or children in the father, but the court hearing such issue of custody may exercise its sound discretion, taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, as to whose custody such child or children shall be awarded, the duty of the court being in all such cases in exercising such discretion to look to and determine solely what is for the best interests of the child or children, and what will best promote their welfare and happiness, and make award accordingly.

"Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, that all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed."

The "mothers' rights bill," as it has been termed, was ably advocated in the house by Representatives John Y. Smith, Sam L. Olive, Ed Wohlwender, Wallace Miller and Ben J. Fowler. Many of the other leading members of the house voted and worked for it.

In the senate the bill was pushed by Senator John T. Allen, W. D. McNeill, M. D. Irwin, E. L. Smith, A. H. Burtz and W. L. Converse. An overwhelming majority of the other senators sympathized with the measure and gave it their cordial support.

Several of the senators made warm and enthusiastic speeches in favor of the bill just prior to the taking of the aye and nay vote.

In the course of his argument Senator M'Neill said:

"This bill is proper, it is just, it is legislation we ought to be proud to pass. At present in Georgia every judge is under the impression that he must award a child to a father, all things being equal. This bill merely does away with the old view, dismisse all partiality, and leaves the child's welfare the main thing to be thought of in awarding the custody. Both parents are absolutely on a par, while it is left to the discretion of the judge to say which shall be the more fit to care for the child. The old law is a relic of the Dark Ages, let us pass this equitable and just measure."

Senator oCnverse spoke, in his own language, "a word in behalf of mothers," in which he made a strong plea that the bill be passed.

Senator John T. Allen vigorously espoused the bill in the five minutes allowed him to explain his vote. He declared it was a most righteous measure and that such a law was needed so that no judge might misunderstand his authority in awarding the custody of minor children.

Judge Allen's speech was a most impressive one and was no doubt largely responsible for the overwhelming majority vote given the bill.

Under the present laws of Georgia prima facie rights to the custody of minor children are vested in their fathers, but the new law does not assume that either parent has superior rights. The mother has the same standing in courts as the father. The judge must take into consideration all the facts and circumstances and award the children to the parent best able to conserve and advance their welfare.

The bill originally introduced in the house met with considerable opposition because it transferred the prima facie rights from the father to the mother. Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth district, came to the rescue with a bill which met the approval of the authors of the house bill and it was substituted by them for their measure. Thereafter the bill had clear sailing.

Following is the way the senate voted:

For the Bill—Allen, Bulloch, Burtz, Bush, Chemnaitz, Converse, Dickey, Du Bose, Elkins, Ford, Foster, Harrell, Hizon, Hute, Irwin, Jones of the Twenty-first, Jones of the Thirty-ninth, Kea, Longino, McNeil, Miller, Moore, Olliff, Parrish, Perry, Peyton, Pope, Richardson, Rushin, Searcy Smith, Spinks, Sweat, Turner, Tyson and Watts. Total, 36.

Against the Bill—Stark and Tarver. Total, 2.

Not Voting—Johnson, Kelly, McGregor, Brown and Taylor. Total, 5.

KILLS SELF WHILE WIFE IS AWAY AT A FUNERAL

Andrew J. Grubb, Building Contractor, Ends Life Because of Despondency

While his wife was attending a funeral Andrew J. Grubb, a building contractor, living at 1508 DeKalb avenue, Thursday morning committed suicide by taking strychnine.

Mr. Grubb had seemed despondent all day. He left his home early in the morning to take a walk and when returning about 10:30 o'clock passed an old friend who inquired after his health. Mr. Grubb responded he had never felt worse before in his life and ten minutes later he was found dead in his home.

Mr. Grubb was about fifty-five years of age. Besides his wife he is survived by three grown sons and a daughter.

was tabled and the probation bill passed after long and heated debate.

The measure that survived provides that in exceptional cases the judge may, at his discretion, place convicted persons on probation and allow them to serve their sentences outside of jails, prisons or other houses of detention. It provides further that in the event of a fine, the amount may be paid in installments.

Both of these measures were introduced through the efforts of the Men and Religion Forward Movement as companion bills to the bill to establish a home for wayward girls under the age of sixteen years.

The final morning session of the house of representatives was uninteresting and free from usual squabbling over petty matters. Lack of general interest was manifest from the outset.

The general bills passed were of little importance and those killed or tabled only the passing interest. General disorder and restlessness marked the session and adjournment which is almost sure to come during the afternoon will be welcomed by the few who have remained for the closing hours.

A sale of Undermuslins to live long in the memory of Atlanta women!

There is no fair way to compare it with any that they have ever been invited to. Its opportunities and economies are too great, in proof whereof we submit the prices below, and offer this suggestion to guide you as whether you could possibly afford to miss the sale---the garments are those that won their way into the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. stocks because they were worth their former prices, the reductions are true and real.

The woman who knows Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. values at regular prices need not be told what to expect in the way of sheer fabrics, of soft laces and dainty embroideries.

What an opportunity there is for women in general, for brides-to-be in particular, even for brides-to-be within a six months or a year. Read on!

Gowns

Formerly $1.25, $1.50 to $2, Are 95c

Formerly $2.25, $2.50 to $3, Are $1.25

Formerly $3.25, $3.50 to $5, Are $1.59

Those now 95c show yokes and sleeves trimmed with shadow, imitation cluny and round thread laces, short sleeves, slipover styles. Those now $1.25 are more elaborate, many with Empire yokes, medallions of embroidery surrounded by fine laces. Those now $1.59 have exquisite French Valencienes and shadow lace trimmings, some are hand embroidered, the nainsook is a wonderfully soft sheer fabric.

Princess Slips

Formerly 95c and $1.00 Are 69c

Formerly $1.50 and $2.00 Are 95c

Formerly $3.00 to $5.00 Are $1.98

At 69c you may choose from a number of serviceable and neatly trimmed styles with linen laces in both the yokes and the flounces. Many of those at 95c have imitation Irish crochet laces in yokes and flounces, others round thread and cluny laces and embroideries ribbon-run—a fine variety. Those at $1.98 are truly charming affairs made dainty with fine laces and ribbon-run embroidery. All are flat trimmed and narrow.

French combinations that were $7.50 to $15 are marked now $2.98. Corset cover and circular cut drawers, the hand-embroidery---done as only the French can---is in eyelet and floral designs. Some are trimmed with hand-made cluny laces.

Petticoats

Formerly $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 Are 69c

Formerly $2.00, $3.00 to $5.00 Are $1.59

Many of those now 69c are the straight petticoats with narrow flounces of embroidery that women want for wear under the princess slips, others show wider and more elaborate flounces of ribbon-run embroideries. Those now $1.59 are notable values even in this sale—the materials would cost much more than the $1.59. Any number of lace and embroidery trimmed styles and one is as pretty as another. Also at this price are sheer mull petticoats in pink, light blue and lavender, trimmed with laces and satin rosettes.

Princess Slips

Formerly $7.50 to $15 (French) Are $3.25

Formerly $7.50 to $12 (American-Made) Are $3.25

The French hand-made slips are reduced to this extremely low price because the skirts are wider than is now the vogue, but the smart woman will quickly see how to convert them into the narrow style and save a hand-embroidered flounce for another. The hand-embroidery is beautifully worked. The American-made slips are elaborate with fine laces and embroideries and ribbons, in yokes, in panels, in flounces, Cluny, filet and Valenciennes lace.

French hand-made petticoats that were $10.00 to $25.00 are now $6.98. The embroidery is in floral and eyelet designs. They are the wide skirts that you will doubtless cut-down---only a few of these.

The Misfortunes of Gov. Sulzer.

It is more in sorrow than in anger that most men regard the dark scandal which has beclouded William Sulzer, the impeached governor of New York. Despite the gravity of the misdeeds with which he is charged and the formidable evidence of his guilt, there is nevertheless a strong current of public pity, if not sympathy, tinged with a hope that even yet his errors may prove to have sprung from circumstances of which he was unaware or from a weakness of judgment rather than a criminal intent.

The confession of Governor Sulzer's wife that in a time of financial embarrassment for their household, she indorsed checks, intended for campaign funds, with her husband's name but without his knowledge and used them for purchasing stocks, may or may not have any effect upon the impeachment trial; but it carries the ring of truth and may at least palliate, though not purge away, the wrongs of which the governor is accused. The more serious of the charges are that he diverted campaign contributions to his private account, using them for Wall Street speculations and that in his sworn statement of receipts and expenses he failed to report certain donations to the campaign fund. It remains to be seen, of course, whether Mrs. Sulzer's admissions will explain these discrepancies. Her statement at least opens a way for interesting possibilities.

That the governor's public career is at end can scarcely be doubted and, if the facts alleged are proved, his punishment will be well deserved. But there is one circumstance which should not be overlooked and it is this: until William Sulzer struck independently forth to be the governor of New York in deed as well as in name, until he defied the political machine, both Democratic and Republican, he was unmolested. The hand behind his impeachment is that of Boss Murphy and Tammany Hall.

Had he consented to do Murphy's bidding, to appoint Murphy's nominees to high offices and turn the government of the State over to the ring, he would never have faced the charges that have been brought against him, whether they be true or false. He opposed the "machine" and, so, the "machine" determined to crush him at all hazards and by any method. Whether he be guilty or not, the situation is one that spells the shame of Tammany as well as the shame of Sulzer.

Postal Simplicity.

Postmaster General Burleson has wisely concluded that it is neither necessary nor advisable to require the use of a special stamp on parcel post matter. When the present supply of such stamps is exhausted no more will be printed; in the meantime, in order to hasten their retirement, they are being sold for letter postage, while ordinary stamps are allowed on parcel post mail.

This will relieve the system of a detail that was often confusing and inconvenient to the public. The parcel post should be as simple in its rules as practical conditions will permit. Indeed, the efficiency and service of an institution so far-reaching and so close to the daily affairs of all the people as is the postoffice demand that all its regulations be as free as possible from red tape. The discontinuance of the special stamp is, as the New York World points out, in line with the policy of Great Britain, "where one set of stamps does duty for all purposes—for letters, parcels, registry, special delivery, as well as for payment of revenue charges."

A Long Step in the Right Direction.

By its enactment of the Anderson-Miller tax equalization bill, the Legislature has taken long step toward placing the State's fiscal affairs on a just and businesslike basis. If this measure has its defects, time will discover them and experience will point the way to needful changes but the important fact is that a constructive beginning has been made and a great barrier in the path of Georgia's development removed. Upon the adoption of some adequate plan of tax reform, hung scores of vital issues—the payment of school teachers, the support of public institutions, the carrying out of urgent enterprises in behalf of agricultural, educational and social welfare; indeed, upon this one far-reaching question hung the good name and the integrity of the State.

The point had been reached where public needs in Georgia so far exceeded public revenues that the State was unable to discharge its plainest duties to the people. The gap between appropriations and income was growing continually wider. One of two things had to be done; appropriations had to be cut to the extent of paralyzing the State's normal activities or the income had to be increased. The fairest and simplest means to this latter end lay in the establishment of a businesslike system under which all citizens and all counties would pay their rightful share of taxes, a system which will inevitably tend to lighten the average burden of taxation and at the same time assure the State adequate funds.

The House and the Senate are to be congratulated on having agreed upon a measure that will bring this important end to pass. They have thus opened the way to the orderly solution of many problems that lie at the very heart of our common interests and that would have grown more complex and desperately dangerous had they been neglected. We have reason to hope that as the result of equality of taxation among individuals and among counties, the school teachers will hereafter be promptly paid, that public institutions will not be stinted of the bare necessities of their subsistence, that plans for the development of our natural resources will not be delayed or abandoned, that measures looking to social betterment will not be pigeoned-holed for the lack of a few thousand dollars and that Georgia will move forward and upward at a pace that truly represents her natural wealth and her people's ideals.

Every member of the House and the Senate who worked for the enactment of a bill that would relieve the State of its financial embarrassment is entitled to the public's gratitude; and it is but just in this connection to note particularly the faithful service of Mr. Anderson, president of the Senate, and of the decisive service of Mr. Burwell, speaker of the House, whose vote for tax equalization when a tie arose made possible the measure's passage.

The pumpkin crop is another thing to be reckoned with.

Progress in Mexico.

Unofficial though they be, the friendly relationships that have been established between the provisional Mexican government and the President's special envoy, John Lind, are distinctly encouraging. They serve at least to cool those feverish imaginations which foreshadowed all manner of new difficulties, if not perils, for Mr. Lind's visit to the troublous republic. More than that, they afford a basis for frank and quiet counselling that may lead to positive good.

Within forty-eight hours after his arrival in Mexico, Mr. Lind was informally received by Senor Gamboa, minister of foreign affairs in the Huerta cabinet. The difference between a call and a conference is not especially important, if the former opens the way for such diplomatic agreement as is desired. Indeed, the very fact that Mr. Lind's reception was personal rather than official may strengthen his opportunities for dealing freely with the business of his delicate mission. He has been enabled to assure the Huerta government that the intentions of the United States are altogether unselfish and peaceful, thus paving the way for a more thorough understanding. At the same time, by not becoming officially concerned with the Huerta regime, he does not arouse the antagonism of the revolutionary element.

Whatever representations or suggestions Mr. Lind has to make in Mexico he can submit to Charge O'Shaugnessy who will "transmit them in accordance with diplomatic proprieties to the minister of foreign relations." It has become evident, indeed, that the position of the President's envoy is a peculiar one and that because of this very circumstance is advantageous. Washington, it is announced, is more hopeful for a peaceful settlement of the Mexican problem than it has been since the recent crisis was threatened. In any event, the prudent-self-restrained policy of the administration is being thoroughly justified.

Much reading will not make a full man as quickly as much feeling.

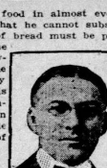
OUR DAILY BREAD

II. IN MANY LANDS.

By Frederic J. Haskin



Bread is a staple article of food in almost every land. Even the savage knows that he cannot subsist on meat alone and some form of bread must be provided to satisfy his hunger. The farther he is removed from civilization the cruder will be the method by which this daily bread is provided to him. His bread is perhaps his only manufactured article of food and in this manufacture some crude process of milling as well as of mixing and baking takes place.

• • •

In Lapland the fur-clad natives grind their scanty oats with the inner bark of the pine tree. The meal thus obtained is mixed with water and molded into flat cakes and baked over a fire. In Kamchatka sometimes oats are not obtainable, so the women pound up pine or birch bark either separately or together, and make this bark powder into their native bread food. The Icelander is a little better off. The "Iceland moss" which he is able to scrape off the rocks makes a fine flour and the bread and puddings made from it are palatable to most northern travelers. A traveler in Siberia pronounces the native bread of that country "the hardest hard-tack in the world." It is made without yeast or salt and is molded into small white rings. It is first steamed and then baked lightly. It is not only hard and tough as well, but it seems to possess a high degree of nutritive value.

This Siberian bread is used for several other purposes beside food. The engineers who constructed the Siberian railroad were first to note its adaptability. The natives drop the rings into hot tallow and this tallow bread was used for soup or eaten with tea for months. The engineers discovered that these tallow soaked bread rings could be used for boiling coffee or for impromptu candles. Six or eight holes would be bored into a bread ring by using a nail. Wax tapers were laced in these nail holes. The combination would burn about an hour emitting heat and light enough to make a small tent comfortable and at the same time boil water for tea or coffee. There would be a strong odor of toasting bread which was vastly preferable to the smoke of a small fire inside of a tent. The Siberian merchants also use the ringed bread as a counting apparatus for calculating small sums. The strings are suspended above the counter, ten bread rings strung on each. The top line represents rubles and the two lower ones kopeks.

In the Molucca islands the starchy pith of the sago palm furnishes a white floury meal from which the natives make a sort of bread. They make it into flat, oblong loaves, which are baked in curious little ovens divided into small cells, each large enough to hold but a single loaf of bread. In some parts of South America and of Africa bread is made by the natives from manico tubers, which are a deadly poison if not properly prepared. To make manico bread the roots are cut and soaked in water for several days to wash out the poison. The fibers are then picked out and dried and ground into flour. This flour is mixed with milk if obtainable. If not, water is used to form a stiff dough, which is molded into little round loaves and baked either in hot ashes or dried in the sun.

An American baker traveling in Central America experimented considerably with plantain. He sliced and dried the green plantains and ground them into a fine, mealy flour. He found it excellent for pastry as it produced a flaky crust, so he delighted the members of his party by planning pie, the crust of which was made from the green plantain flour and the filling from ripe plantain which, when cooked, greatly resembled pumpkin. The making of plantain flour for export is one of the possible industries of tropical America in the near future. It has been tested by a number of chemists in the United States who certify to its digestibility. It is believed that plantain bread would be a valuable food for certain classes of invalids, as it contains some properties not found in wheat.

The Caribs of Central America make a cavassa bread which has been much exploited by visitors to that country. The cavassa is a tuber of good size and the flour is obtained by a peculiar method. The tough skin is removed and the tuber is grated on a long grater made by pounding small pieces of sharp flinty stone into a slab of mahogany. The grater is long enough to reach from a wooden tub on the floor to a woman's waist. The women rub the roots the whole length of the grater, keeping time in their motions to some of the weird songs and chants. The grated root is put in a strainer six or eight feet long tapering from six inches at the top to two and a half at the bottom. This strainer is woven of palm fiber so that when it is fastened at the top and a heavy weight hung at the bottom the juice is squeezed out of the mass, which then resembles grated cocoanut in appearance. This paste is baked by spreading it about a quarter of an inch thick upon a long griddle.

The action of the heat makes the particles of cassava adhere, so that just as soon as it begins to turn it is done. These thin cakes, which are about twenty-four inches in length, are then packed up in bundles of twelve or fifteen, wrapped in the leaves of a species of canna plant, and sent to the native markets. There is little flavor to cavassa bread. Most people think it much like chips, but it will keep indefinitely if dry and is nutritious and wholesome and, therefore, a valuable food to the natives of that country.

In Egypt, whenever coffee is ordered, sheets of bread are served with it. These sheets of thin bread are peculiar to Egypt and after the traveler has grown accustomed to them he is apt to be fond of them. In color and appearance they resemble chamois skin and they are made of flour and the pulp of sultana raisins pressed together and dried in the sun. They are sweet and full of nutriment. Like the Siberian bread rings, the bread sheets of Egypt have uses other than for mere food. They are used as awnings and screens and to hold papers. These uses are only possible in dry weather, however, as when wet these bread sheets crumble up and are as sodden as wet paper.

The Bedouin bread is a peculiar article differing from that of any other nation in the world. It is made of samh, a small plant which grows over the desert plateau east of Man. The samh, which is said to grow plentifully when there have been generous rainfalls, is a small plant with short thick stems, resembling the lentil. The plants grow close together and the Bedouin women pull them up by hand and flail them with a stick, thus removing the small seed pods. These pods are taken to the wells and holes about the size of a bath tub are made in the sandy clay and filled with water. The pods are thrown into these holes in small quantities and the women stir them with sticks and tramp them with their bare feet. This action in the water opens the pods, the seeds fall to the bottom and the hulls float. This process requires only about ten minutes. When a sufficient quantity has been thus treated the water is dipped out and the seeds are spread out to dry. After this they are sifted through fine sieves to remove as much of the sand and grit as possible, and then ground into flour in small stone hand mills. The flour is made into dough with sometimes a little molasses added to improve its flavor. It is baked either upon a thin sheet iron circular pan by having a small fire built under it, or in one of the queer, dome-shaped clay ovens known only in the desert. Those have an opening on top and are heated by small fires kept burning outside of them. The floor is covered with pebbles upon which the dough is laid to be baked. Bedouin bread is black and gritty, for much sand remains as a result of the method of separating the seeds from the pods.

Ben and Doctor Samuel

(Kansas City Star.)

Ben Jonson dominated his literary circle about as effectually as Dr. Samuel Johnson dominated his. Alfred Noyes makes Ben the central figure in his "Tales of the Mermaid Tavern."

The modern poet follows history and literary annals closely. The Will Shakespeare living men knew was a secondary light to the Big Ben they also knew.

Ben Jonson was like Samuel Johnson in physical makeup, and in the browbeating faculty. The Johnson who dropped his "h" weighed "twenty stone," as he wrote to one of his patrons. Dr. Samuel was almost as heavy. It is curious to consider the epileptic, prayerful Doctor Johnson as a first-class fightin' man. But numerous tradesmen and booksellers could have warned Lord Chesterfield of his quality. Ben Jonson carried in his thumb the Tyburn brand for having killed a man in a duel.

Both Ben Jonson and Sam Johnson were prodigiously learned; both were classical in their literary likings; though Ben, at least, inspired innovations in others and was swept into innovations by the spirit of his time.

Soldiers As Poets

(London Telegraph.)

In the knapsacks of both the Greek and Bulgar soldiers little poems are often found. The correspondent of the Telegraph at Saloniki forwards a translation of one of each as curiously characteristic of the racial differences:

GREEK SOLDIER'S POEM.

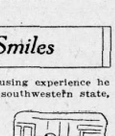
I leave my lovely island home, Corfu.
The lanes where I have strayed,
The mother dear who bore me,
The father old and gray,
The maiden whom I loved so true,
And friends both far and near,
For thee, my country, best beloved,
I go to fight and die.

BULGAR SOLDIER'S POEM.

Mother, are you not content?
Four cartloads I have brought,
Four cartloads full of precious loot
And one of silver full.
Mother, are you not weary yet
Of hiding under the damp earth
The corpses I have killed?
Are you not tired of washing clean
Of bloodstains black and red
The vestments and the vessels rich?
Are you not yet content?

A Batch of Smiles

An Atlanta man tells of an amusing experience he had in a mountainous region in a southwestern state, where the inhabitants are notoriously shiftless. Arriving at a dilapidated shanty at the noon hour, he inquired as to the prospect for getting dinner.



The head of the family, who had been "resting" on a fallen tree in front of his dwelling, made reply to the effect that he "guessed ma'd hev suthin onto the table putty soon."

With this encouragement the traveler dismounted. To his chagrin, however, he soon discovered that the food set before him was such that he could not possibly "make a meal." He made such excuses as he could for his lack of appetite, and finally bethought himself of a kind of nourishment which he might venture to take and which was sure to be found in any locality. He asked for some milk.

"Don't have milk no more," said the head of the place. "The dawg's dead."

"The dog!" cried the stranger.

"What on earth has the dog to do with it?"

"Well," explained the host meditatively, "them cows don't seem to know 'nough to come up an' be milked theirselves. The dog, he used to go for 'em and fetch 'em up."—Lippincott's.

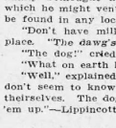
A wealthy New York syndicate determined that it would be much to the furtherance of some large plans on hand if it could purchase the New York Herald.



So a cable was sent to James Gordon Bennett:

"Please wire best price for which you will sell New York Herald."

That evening the answer came:

"Daily, 3 cents; Sunday 5 cents.

"JAMES GORDON BENNETT."

One day a pastor was calling upon a dear old lady, one of the "pillars" of the church to which they both belonged. As he thought of her long and useful life, and looked upon her sweet, placid countenance bearing but few tokens of her ninety-two years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to ask her: "My dear Mrs. S., what has been the chief source of your strength and sustenance during all these years? What has appeared to you as the real basis of your unusual vigor of mind and body, and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joy and sorrow? Tell me, that I may pass the secret on to others, and, if possible, profit by it myself."

The old lady thought a moment, then, lifting her eyes, dim with age, but kindling with sweet memories of the past, answered briefly: "Victuals."

Among the presents lately showered upon a dusky bride in a rural section of Virginia was one that was the gift of an old woman with whom both bride and groom were great favorites.

Some time ago, it appears, the old woman accumulated a supply of cardboard mottoes, which she worked and had framed as occasion arose.

So it hapened that in a neat combination of blues and reds, suspended by a cord of orange, there hung over the table whereon the other presents were displayed for the delectation of the wedding guests this motto: "Fight on; fight ever."—Lippincott's.

Two boys who managed to be rather unruly in school so exasperated their teacher that she requested them to remain after hours and write their names 1,000 times. They plunged into the task. Some fifteen minutes later one of them grew uneasy and began watching his companion in disgrace. Suddenly the first one burst out with despair between sobs and said to the teacher:

"'Tain't fair, mum! His name is Bush and mine's Schlutter-meyer."

The Teacher—You see, had the lamb been obedient and stayed in the fold it would not have been eaten by the wolf, would it?

Boy (promptly)—No, m'am; it would have been eaten by us.

THE PATERSON STRIKE

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

On February 25, 1913, began the strike of the silk workers in Paterson, N. J., which continued for months. At the end of the twenty-first week it was estimated that the strikers had lost $5,250,000 in wages; the manufacturers had lost their spring and summer orders, amounting to millions; many small tradespeople had gone to the wall because they could extend credit no longer, and business generally had suffered to an extent impossible to estimate.

Stand off a little from the immediate passions of the situation, look at it rationally, and absurd it all seems! Here are thousands of people directly or indirectly interested in the manufacture of silk goods; their interests are identical; their success is interlocking; the prosperity of each depends upon the prosperity of all. It would seem that for bread-and-butter's sake they would have sense enough to use reason, forbearance and self-restraint, so as to organize in such manner as would bring profit to all.

Instead of that they give free rein to greed, stubborn pride, violence and hate. The whole bunch of them, employers and employed, would rather kick and bray like wild asses in a pasture and lose twenty million dollars than to come together like intelligent beings and arrange a plan that would give some degree of satisfaction all around.

What is the cause of this? What are those strange elements that make such fools of mortals and enter as partitions of iron between men and men?

The causes are far-reaching and complex. The troubled condition of things is due to the imperfect state of human society. We do not yet know how to live together on this earth. The fruit of civilization is still green and sour. The only healing will be to outgrow our present state. But some causes may be pointed out:

First. We do not yet begin to realize democracy, which implies the organization and co-operation of the whole people.

Second. We are still in the ghost-clutch of the class idea. We can only organize as classes. We can only love our own class. We still hate the classes not our own. We cannot understand organization for humanity, for the welfare of every man.

Third. We are still heathen in our economics, as we are in our statecraft. For we call race-hatred, pride, greed, fox-cunning, and wolf-robbery—we call these motives PRACTICAL, while we sneer at love, mutuality, ultimate justice, and helpfulness as visionary and IMPRACTICAL.

Fourth. We do not as yet perceive the full, normal function of government. We conceive its business to be merely to PUNISH CRIME; that it is to stand off and not interfere until society, business, or the individual breaks down. As a matter of fact, the government of the future will not punish at all; it will prevent, heal, cure. Slowly we are learning that business is government; that the only government is the organization of the industrial activities of the entire body of the people, to make profits with equity to all, and to distribute profits, giving to every man his just due. At present when a governor or mayor attempts to adjust a strike the employers tell him to mind his own business, and the employed curse him for attempting even to maintain law and order.

Some day we shall realize that the system of private ownership of plant and capital on the one hand and class solidarity of labor on the other, fighting and hating like wildcats, while the "government of the people, by the people, and for the people" is compelled to keep hands off, is a mad and wasteful system worthy only of half-barbarous minds.

Through what wild heats of insane selfishness, what oceans of money-waste, what depths of bitterness and agony democracy must pass to reach the point where it can believe that plain, simple justice is best for all! That charity, benevolence and feudal kindness are but humbug substitutes for justice!

The tariff system, with its special privileges to be bestowed on the diligent, has been a constant incentive to lobbying. As long as the government puts up premiums for pernicious activity along this line so long will interests go after the premiums. If there is to be a division of favors in the way of tariff bounties, inevitably there will be efforts to get the favors. And inevitably the infection will spread. Governmental favors as between employers and employes will be sought. And so on. A grab-bag policy of legislation will set persons to grabbing.

A mark of inevitableness distinguishes the procedure of the National Association of Manufacturers. Its activities were the natural fruits of a sytem that promotes lobbying.—Kansas City Star.

Allen Deas, of Camden, S. C., Suffers Apoplexy Stroke at Grand Bulding

While on his way to the prize fight Wednesday night, Allen Deas, of Camden, S. C., suffered a sudden stroke of apoplexy, and died within five minutes. Mr. Deas, in company with his son-in-law, W. L. Watson, of this city, was in front of the Grand building at the time. He was taken into Elkin's drug store in the building but failed to revive.

Mr. Deas was sixty-five years of age, a Confederate veteran and a prominent citizen of Camden, S. C. He and his wife had been visiting their children in the city for the past several days. WOULD-BE SUICIDE WAS SON OF RICH MERCHANT

Wealthy Baltimorean Comes to Take Home Man Who Disappeared From Hotel

The mystery surrounding the identity of the well dressed young man who attempted to commit suicide by taking a drug in front of the Grand pharmacy last Thursday, has been cleared by the police.

He told officers when they visited him at Grady hospital that his name was D. Schwartz and he was the son of a rich Baltimore merchant, named Morris Schwartz. Mr. Schwartz was immediately notified and came to Atlanta on the first train. He corroborated the young man's story, and with every effort at secrecy left for Baltimore with the young man on Sunday.

"For a certain purpose," is the only explanation young Schwartz would give his father of his attempt at suicide.

Young Schwartz registered at the Ansley hotel and there semed in good spirits and excellent health. He spent his money freely and made acquaintances. He was first missed from the hotel Thursday morning, the day he attempted suicide.

Auto Going Downhill Turns Turtle When It Strikes Flock of Sheep

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DOTHAN, Ala., Aug. 14.—The 18-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Williams, of Ashford, was killed and Mr. and Mrs. Williams, their three other children, and Miss Hutto were painfully injured when their automobile was wrecked at 8:30 o'clock last night about six miles east of Dothan on the Ashford road.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams, their four small children and Miss Hutto, were returning to their home in Ashford from Dothan, and while going down a grade at a rapid rate the car ran into a flock of sheep and turned turtle, landing upside down in a ditch.

A passing car carried them to Ashford. The other members of the party are not seriously injured.

UNIVERSITY CLUB WILL FURTHER EDUCATION

A circular letter to the non-resident members of the University club of Atlanta has been issued by Thomas W. Donnally, secretary of the organization, in which views are asked concerning the proposed formation of a board of non-resident members.

The purpose of this board is to have a number of men scattered over the state who are interested and will act in concert in bringing together those who are interested in broader mental development.

The circular states: "There are many things connected with educational matters in the state that are far from creditable. Any organization that will bring our college men together along educational and social lines for the interchange of ideas related to our needs, and the best methods of development will do good."

It is proposed that the board be composed of twenty-five or more members.

The particulars relative to the death of Lewis were vague.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Declare Injustice Was Done To Nunnally and Shuptine.

Members of the rules committee of the house declare that an injustice has been done Representatives Nunnally, of Floyd, and Shuptrine, of Chatham, of that committee, by the statements that these two gentlemen tried to block the bill establishing a home for wayward girls.

According to the other members of the committee, Messrs. Nunnally and Shuptrine were both heartily in favor of the measure and aided materially, not only in obtaining its favorable consideration at the hands of the board, but in seeing it through the house.

Charles W. Crankshaw, the jeweler who made the service at the request of the late Joseph M. Terrell, at that time governor of the state, appeared before the committee. He told the committee that the donations to the gift made by the cities of the state, amounted to $6,215, had been paid long ago, but that the state itself still owed a large sum.

The sentiment of the majority of the committee appeared to be that a debt which involves the honor and integrity of the state as this does should be paid at whatever cost.

Committee Wants State to Pay for Silver Service.

The appropriations committee of the house voted Tuesday afternoon to pay the debt of $1,300 which the state owes on the silver service which was presented to the battleship Georgia at the Jamestown exposition.

Tax Equalization Law Combines Features of Many House Bills.

The senate's tax equalization bill, which was passed by the house Tuesday afternoon, is largely a composite measure, many of its essential features having been taken from bills introduced in the house early in the present session.

The idea of a state tax commissioner in lieu of a state board of equalizers was adopted from the bill of Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd.

Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, introduced the bill providing for tax discoverers to be appointed by and work under local or county boards of equalizers. This iden was adopted in the senate bill.

Neither the house ways and means committee bill nor the Sheppard substitute provided for tax discoverers. The Wright bill did have such provision, but under its terms they were to be appointed by the state tax commissioner.

The senate bill leaves the selection of tax discoverers to the local of county boards.

From the bill of Representative F. A. Lipscomb, of Clarke, were taken the ideas for local boards of assessors and state control of county returns.

Governor Urged to Give New Judgeship to Atlanta Lawyer.

Several well known members of the Atlanta bar met Tuesday afternoon in the office of Attorney Hollins Randolph and passed resolutions requesting Governor Slaton to appoint a member of the Atlanta bar to the new Fulton county superior court judgeship just created by the legislature.

Judge L. S. Roan, of the Stone Mountain circuit, has been persistently mentioned for this place, and the attorneys who memorialized the governor Tuesday declared that there was no objection whatever to Judge Roan, but they thought that inasmuch as the new court would be an Atlanta and Fulton county court the judge to preside over it should be a member of the Atlanta bar.

The resolutions congratulate the Stone Mountain circuit on having such an able and distinguished judge as Judge Roan. Until the past few days it had been generally conceded that Judge Roan, who is now and has been for several months, a resident of Atlanta, would get the new place.

Governor Slaton is expected to make an appointment within the next few days. A large number of Atlanta lawyers have petitioned him in Judge Roan's behalf.

Wallace Miller May Enter Macon's Mayoralty Contest

Representative Wallace Miller, of Bibb, is receiving many telegrams and letters from leading citizens of Macon urging him to allow the use of his name as a candidate for mayor of the Central City.

Several meetings have been held in Macon at which resolutions were passed urging Mr. Miller to enter the race. The younger element of business and professional men of Macon inaugurated the movement in Mr. Miller's behalf and they have been joined by many of the older citizens.

Mr. Miller is a young lawyer of exceptional ability. He is energetic, progressive and patriotic. His record in the legislature is a most admirable one, and if he decides to enter the mayoralty contest he will start out with a large and powerful following.

New Medical Board Will be Composed of Old Board Members

Since the passage of the medical practice bill, providing for a composite board of examiners with authority over all medical practitioners in the state, there has been some speculation as to who would be appointed on this board by Governor Slaton.

It is understood that so far as possible the governor will appoint members of the three old boards affected to places on the new board. If this policy is carried out the governor will appoint all five of the members of the regular board of medical examiners, three members from the eclectic board and two from the homeopathic board.

The new board will have ten members, five allopaths, three eclectics and two homeopathse.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 14.—That Cincinnati has lost former President William H. Taft as its most prominent citizen, was made known today through the report of the collector of taxes in the ward in which Mr. Taft formerly resided. The assessor reported that he had never received a report from Mr. Taft as to his taxation. The board of review, the official taxing body, took up the matter with Mr. Taft at his summer home at Point-Au-Pic, Canada. Mr. Taft replied that he had become a citizen of New Haven, Conn.

COUNTRY BANKS WILL BE CARED FOR IN FUND

Treasury Secretary Impatient With Report That City Institutions Will Fail to Help

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—Following the conference tomorrow between treasury officials and far western bankers concerning the deposit of $50,000,000 in southern and western banks to facilitate the movement of crops, the treasury department will issue a statement amplifying its reasons for not scattering the funds by depositing them in the smaller cities of the territory to be affected.

The department has been flooded with requests from smaller banks for deposits and bombarded by congressmen from the rural districts, pleading that the funds be not confirmed in the larger cities of the agricultural states. Assistant Secretary Williams, in charge of the distribution of the fund, again explained today that it would be obviously impossible, under the general scheme of relief, for the department to deal directly with all of the banks in the agricultural states, because the treasury department has not the machinery necessary. He is confident that the city banks selected for depositories will deal fairly and liberally with their country correspondents, and that the chief object of the distribution of the fund will be accomplished.

Because he is entirely familiar with the attitude of the city bankers themselves as regards the fund and because he has entire confidence in their purpose to deal fairly with the country banks, Assistant Secretary Williams displayed impatience with the complaints that has come from some sections of the south and west about the distribution. The criticism is not only unfounded, but is an injustice to the integrity of the bankers themselves, in the opinion of Mr. Williams.

"In all of the conferences between treasury officials and bankers," said Mr. Williams, "the banks have been impressed with the purpose of the department to require them to deal liberally with their country correspondents. The necessity for this has been enjoined, and the department has assurances that are entirely satisfactory. The character of security that the department expects to accept for the deposits, the limit time, and the lack of machinery make it impossible for the department to deal directly with all the banks that want a part of the fund."

TURNS UP SKELETON OF OLDEST FOSSIL MAMMAL

Prof. Osburn Makes Several Valuable Finds in Desert of Colorado

(By Associated Press.)

DURANCO, Colo., Aug. 14.—Discovery of the most ancient skeleton of a fossil mammal ever found on this continent was announced by Prof. Henry Fairefd Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, today, on arriving with a party of scientists from the desert sixty miles southwest of Farmington, N. M.

The skeleton was found in the Kimbetch draw, directly north of Pueblo Portia, by the museum party, headed by Walter Gronger. According to Fro Osborn it represents the beginning of mammalian life on this continent. The specimen is about the size of a wolf and is an herbivorous animal. In the same draw complete skulls were found, one of a large carnivorous type.

KANSAS CITY PUMPS FAIL TO SUPPLY CITY

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 14.—The protracted drouth has caused such a strain on the pumping capacity of the waterworks stations in this city that S. Y. High, superintendent of the city water department, today recommended that the city install a dual water system to increase the water supply.

Officials of the local packing houses, which manufacture much of the ice used here, announced today that the demands for ice had been so great recently that they were forced to reduce the amount supplied to each dealer. Because of this, some of the dealers have been unable to supply all their customers.

Farmer Gives Life To Rescue Friend From Gas in Well

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 14.—In rescuing a friend overcome by gas in a well south of here, E. A. Harden, an aged farmer living near here, lost his own life. Jim Seay, his friend, was hauled to safety after Harden had tied a rope around him.

The two were cleaning out a well, Seay being in the well and Harden on the surface. Feeling a numbness coming over him, Seay uttered a call for help and collapsed. Harden called assistance and had himself lowered into the well. He reached Seay, tied the rope securely around him, and then fell senseless as Seay was being pulled up.

No one would volunteer to go to his assistance immediately, and he was dead before the body could be removed from the well.

M'NEIL AND PRICE IN CLASH IN SENATE ROOM

Friends Avert Fight When Commissioner Says McNeil Told Untruth

Senator W. D. McNeil and Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price came near having a fist fight in an anteroom of the senate Wednesday afternoon, but friends interfered before any damage was done.

At the morning session of the senate Senator McNeil had opposed a house bill giving a special appropriation to the department of agriculture, declaring that the bill would place no limit on the expenditures of the department. The bill was passed.

Early in the afternoon when Senator McNeil left the senate, he met Commissioner Price in the president's room.

"Well, you whipped me out," McNeil is reported to have said.

"Yes," replied Price. "But some things you said this morning were not true."

"You mean I lied?"

"No, but some things you said were untrue."

As the commissioner said this, Senator McNeil made a lunge at him, but friends stepped between them and further trouble was averted.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

"Fresh eggs for breakfast every morning certainly are good," said Chatterer the Red Squirrel to himself, and smacked his lips. "If I could only get Sammy Jay to go up to the old orchard this morning, as he did yesterday morning I almost know that Drummer the Woodpecker and Mrs. Drummer would be so angry at the very sight of him that both would chase him and this would give me a chance to steal another egg from them."

Chatterer tried and tried to think of some plan to get Sammy Jay to visit the old orchard, but he was smart enough to know that if he seemed to want Sammy to go there Sammy would right away begin to suspect who it was who had made Drummer think that he was the thief who had stolen the eggs. Of course this wouldn't do at all. Chatterer had just about given up all hope of having a fresh egg for breakfast that morning when his sharp eyes caught sight of an acquaintance and all in a flash a plan came into his head—a plan that made him chuckle right out.

Now the acquaintance whom Chatterer had caught a glimpse of was Mistah Mocker the Mockingbird. Chatterer hurried after him. "Good morning, Mistah Mocker!" he called in his politest manner.

"Good morning, Brer Chatterer," replied Mistah Mocker. "Yo' seem to be feeling very fine this mo'ning. Tell me what yo' are laughing about so that Ah may laugh, too."

"Certainly," replied Chatterer, who all the time had been chuckling as if there was some joke too good to keep. "I was just thinking what a lot of fun you must have with that wonderful voice of yours and how easy it must be to fool people."

"Now there is Sammy Jay," continued Chatterer. "Sammy and Drummer the Woodpecker have quarrelled about something and all the other birds in the old orchard have joined with Drummer against Sammy Jay to keep him out of the old orchard. I was thinking what a joke on them it would be if you should hide over in the far corner of the old orchard and then scream like Sammy Jay. How surprised Drummer and all the rest would be when they rushed over there all ready to fight and found that Sammy wasn't there at all. It would be such a joke! I wish you would lend me your voice, Mistah Mocker."

Now Mistah Mocker loves a joke as well as anyone, and he could see nothing but harmless fun in Chatterer's plan. So without stopping to think that there might be mischief hidden behind it somewhere he promptly replied, "I will lend you my voice, Brer Chatterer. That is, I'll go hide and scream like Sammy Jay and we'll both have a good laugh when we see how surprised Drummer and all the others are when they find that it isn't Sammy Jay at all."

"Good!" cried Chatterer. "I'll go hide where I can see everything."

So Mistah Mocker waited until Chatterer was hidden where he could see everything, then flew over to the far corner of the old orchard and began to scream like Sammy Jay. Sure enough, all the birds in the orchard, headed by Drummer the Woodpecker and Mrs. Drummer, came hurrying toward him crying: "Thief! Thief! Thief!" as loudly as ever they could. Chuckling to himself all the time he kept hidden until they reached the very tree in which he was sitting. Then, laughing fit to kill himself at the joke, he showed himself, expecting every one else to laugh too. But no one did. No sir, no one laughed except Chatterer the Red Squirrel as he scampered away from the home of Drummer the Woodpecker with a beautiful white egg, and Mistah Mocker didn't see him.

CHATTERER CALLED TO SEE MISTAH MOCKER.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

The war on gloves is more exciting than many women realize. The majority abide by the tradition that gloves must be worn in public places and that no fashion can disturb this. But fashion has disturbed it and many of fashion's followers have taken up the new creed of not wearing them at dinners, balls, the opera, or the theater.

They wear them in the streets without questioning. They feel that it would be in bad taste to go in the open in the day time with their hands uncovered, unless they are in the country or seashore. At both of these places gloves are abandoned in summer and only worn in winter for warmth.

Three years ago the statement was made that the fashionable women abroad were discarding gloves at evening affairs, and the news met with violent protest from the merchants. They claimed that long gloves had as great a sale as ever and that the newspapers were wrong in asserting that any dignified woman would go out in the evening without gloves. These protests came from every quarter where gloves are sold just as the same protests were made when the newspapers announced that rough fabrics like ratine were to take the place of broadcloth.

The truth is that broadcloth has been out of fashion for two years, and gloveless women have increased by the hundreds at evening entertainments. This has probably not caused any lack of sales in the glove business for the popularity of shoe buttons has made a steady demand for the long glove. Again there are always a class of women who would not go out in the evening with uncovered arms, and all women must have a few pairs of long gloves for certain uses.

The Uncovered Arms.

It was the French women who started the fashion for wearing short sleeves without gloves, and it was rather strange that they would be the first to do it, because they like to cover their hands, their necks and their heads better than any other civilized women.

The popularity of the fashion, however, was due to the English women who immediately took it up with success, and as far back as two winters ago one saw bare arms at the London theaters, restaurants and operas.

This was to be expected in London for the English have always insisted upon wearing extremely low gowns in the evening at every public place as well as in their own homes when there was no formal occasion for it. What the rest of the world did was small matter to them and they continued on their way which is a habit the English have. When they discarded gloves they were entirely happy and the American women quickly followed suit. Now the fashion is established. One would not say that it was universally followed, but whoever wants to go without gloves in the evening is quite protected by the law of style.

The Transparent Sleeve.

The dressmakers had much to do with this gloveless fashion for they invented evening gowns with all kinds of transparent sleeves, some of which were long, others short. Tulle, lace, and net have been used, and one did not wish to wear short white gloves with sleeves of these fabrics that reached to the wrists; neither did one care to wear long wrinkled gloves with the fashionable draped sleeves of tulle that fell away from the shoulder in Greek style.

It is difficult to be Oriental and Occidental at the same time, and gloves of this kind did not harmonize with wing sleeves that were held to the fore arm with bracelets of paste jewels.

It is natural that these sleeves had much to do with keeping the arm bare and whenever a few women do a thing for one reason there are always many others who will do it for convenience. And this is probably the explanation of the gloveless condition. That the arm is prettier without a glove there is no question, unless it is too red or too scrawny for any kind of beauty.

MOTHERGOOSE FAVORITES TO BE SEEN IN PANTOMIME

One of the most beautiful and artistic of the series of Mother Goose pantomimes to be given this Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the big Sunday school rooms of the Druid Hills Methodist church will be that in which about ten pretty young girls will vivify "Mary's garden."

The young women will be dressed to represent violets, roses, poppies and the various other flowers of the garden and the scene will be one of the most artistic and gorgeous of the many that will be produced.

Although over fifty pretty Druid Hills children will take part in the pantomimes, the entire performance will last only a little more than an hour.

Another splendid feature will be the pantomime of the old woman who lived in a shoe with her numerous children. A gigantic shoe has been made, big enough to house all of the old woman's children at the same time and they actually will be shown living in the shoe.

Old King Cole and his merry fiddlers is a striking feature hitherto unannounced. The three merry fiddlers will perform on miniature "fiddles" that nevertheless make music.

Practically every one of the best known Mother Goose characters will be depicted in pantomime.

The children have been drilled for the occasion under skilled management and the affair promises to be one of the most beautiful and artistic entertainments in which children have been the chief characters ever given in Atlanta.

The seating capacity of the big Sunday school rooms has been enlarged so that all who wish to attend will be provided with comfortable places. The advance sale of tickets indicates a record-breaking crowd.

Workmen have just completed a big stage built especially for the occasion. The costumes of the young people are gorgeous conception of the Mother Goose characters and the properties make the settings extremely beautiful.

The Sunday school rooms are at the corner of Blue Ridge and Seminole avenues. They may be reached conveniently on either the Houston street or Druid Hills cars.

Something in a Name

From time to time in the city's history petitions have been presented to change the name of our city streets. As we all know, a great many of them are named for honored, pioneer citizens—our forefathers, who built the foundation and began the erection of our beautiful, progressive city—the Gate City of the south.

These streets are landmarks, monuments to the memory of these respected old citizens. Far greater are they than marble shafts, for they are the thoroughfares, the broad highways that we daily travel to reach success.

There can be no sound public reason in changing the names of streets, while there are many good reasons against it. For instance, such changes increase the difficulties in tracing real estate titles, and destroy traces of the activities of pioneer citizens in the industrial, business or public affairs of the city in its first growth, particularly evidence of public service in giving land for streets.

Let us keep to the old names, those that are associated with the early struggle of the city, rather than change to new ones that have no local meaning, and, most often, are unappropriate.

Col. J. C. Woodward, College Park, Ga.

My Dear Col. Woodward: I wish to enter my son again in your school for this fall. I am very gratified at his development during the fiscal year just ended.

I feel like it has been a year well spent. He has improved greatly mentally, and physically, though not as much physically as I would like. Would like to see him strengthen up more. I hope, however, that he will show more physical development next year.

He has developed considerably in many qualities since he has been with you. And it is these that make men. My one desire is for him to be a strong, manly man.

I want to see him grow to manhood above everything else in the full possession of those principles that make men 'n the true sense of the word. Sincerely yours, R. E. CATO.

The Evening Story — Pickpockets

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Worner.)

Maida, who had the flower stand in the corner of the big four aisled lobby of the twenty story office building, just caught a glance of him as he ran through—a slim, good-looking young chap, with a green felt hat, and a pair of very sharp steel gray eyes. He dodged in from the east entrance, glanced furtively back as he spurted through the big central space, and shot out the south door into the crowded street. It was about 10:30 and the lobby was comparatively deserted. Most of the men had gone to their offices and the noon rush had not commenced. The few loitering did not look after him except with languid curiosity. Plenty of people in a city are in a rush.

JUST CAUGHT A GLIMPSE OF HIM AS HE RAN THROUGH.

A full minute later, long enough to give the fellow full chance of disappearing in the street's crowd, a fat, purple-jowled, old man, puffing and choking, rushed after. At the top of a raucous voice he was crying, "Pickpocket! Stop him! He got my money —He got—"

Mike, the elevator starter, who was also private policeman, tore across the lobby for a lucid description. "Slim, gray suited, green hat good looking the scoundrel," roared the old man, breaking away from Mike's detaining clutch, and tearing on.

They didn't catch him, of course. State street is thickly dotted with good-looking youths with gray eyes and the correct attire prescribed by spring fashion. The old man turned out to be a broker in the adjoining building. The theft had taken place in a crowded elevator. He had felt the thief's hand leave his pocket as the car touched the first floor. But the fellow had been the first out, and he had been among the last.

Maida was shocked. She hadn't been very long from the farm in Wisconsin and so hadn't acquired the cityite's nonchalance toward crime and criminals. "And he was such a nice looking fellow," she sorrowfully told the aunt with whom she boarded. "Do you suppose he had a sick mother or—"

Her aunt laughed. Her uncle at the other end of the supper table chuckled. Alice, her cousin, a stenographer in the same building, smiled. "They say he's the fellow that's been looting half the offices on State street. The police have been after him for months, but he's too clever for them," she remarked.

Maida forgot him in a week or so. She was a pretty girl, with big truthful blue eyes and hair that rippled like sun-browned cornsilk. Alice had had little trouble persuading the owner of the flower stand to engage her. She justified his estimate of her charm. The flower business boomed, and half the men in the building took to wearing a rose or a carnation. But Maida was a cool-headed girl. The flattery did not affect her. She had too little vanity to credit all that was murmured over flower purchases. She grew expert in parrying impertinent remarks, rebuffing undesired attentions and selling flowers. In time she got used to city ways and was only mildly excited by pickpockets and other incidents of a big towns.

And then one morning, when she was sorting a big heap of pale pink roses and bud into their places in the jars, a clear voice asked her for a dozen calla lilies. She looked up carelessly, and then the hot blood rushed to her cheeks. Across the flower loaded counter, eyeing her interestedly, was the young man of the green hat, steel gray eyes and gray suit, whom the old broken had chosed in furious wrath. He was leaning there nonchalantly, elbows propped among the pink and green heaps, as unconcerned as though the entire ten commandments reposed unfractured in his pocket.

Maida's eyes got big and stern. She hastily looked around for Mike, who would take charge of this audacious fellow. But Mike wasn't in sight; it was his luncheon hour.

"Will you send them this afternoon?" he asked. "They're for a friend who died yesterday—an old lady." His voice held a sad note.

Maida's eyes came back from their search for Mike and softened. It seemed he wasn't utterly hardened. He smiled gayly at her. Her eyes hardeend again. His grief must be very superficial. And he was very follish. Did he think no one would recognize him? He must think people had poor eyes and poor memories. Mike's head was emerging from the basement stairs. Mike came over, flipped a pink bud from the heap and smiled, with the paternal freedom allowed gray whiskers, at Maida. Then he strolled on, while she was opening her lips to tell him to arrest the young miscreant.

She opened them twice and closed them. She had a guilty sense of being an accessory. She didn't know what they would do to him—"they" being the vague law—but she hadn't the heart to send even a scoundrel to prison.

He went away whistling. Maida sadly watched him. Mike turned to watch him. She fancied a vague gleam of recognition lay in Mike's eyes. But instead of hurrying to prod that half-recognition Maida was scared. Why didn't the boy hurry? Didn't he know he might be remembered? She sighed—with something very like relief—when the gray shoulders vanished through the east exit and Mike was busy starting elevators.

Her panic returned when the next day the steel gray eyes smiled over the counter at her and the clear voice said, "Some pink roses, please."

Maida was very sure that it was her duty to call Mike and say, "Here is a pickpocket." But she didn't. She gazed sadly and miserably at him, and sadly wrapped a dozen pink roses in white tissue paper.

After that he came every day. And every day Maida lost a bit of her former serenity and fresh color. Her aunt noticed it and got her a bottle of cod liver oil. Alice, shrewder, suspected a love affair. Maida indignantly denied it. Love! She would never love anybody. And wondered drearily why a pickpocket need have such an honest smile.

When he asked to call some night she snapped him short. He didn't come back for three days. Then he came, apologized, and coolly repeated his request. Maida looked at him so reproachfully that he was puzzled.

"I don't see why," he protested with a certain boyish diffidence. "I want to know you better and I can't hang about this stand any longer without people noticing it." If he hadn't been a pickpocket Maida would have been sure that he was a gentleman. Most men didn't care who noticed them hanging about the stand or what unpleasant attention they drew to her.

She flushed and was almost ready to cry out, when her eyes grew big with fright. From the east entrance the old purple jowled broker was advancing and his eyes were fixed hard upon the young fellow leaning opposite her. His leisurely walk quickened. Maida tried to gasp a warning, but he reached them too soon.

"Say," he began, blusteringly.

"I know what you are going to say," half pettishly returned the boy. "I'll finish those letters after lunch, father."

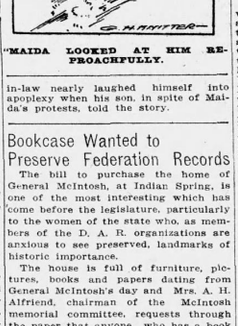
"See that you do," brusquely said the broker, as he hurled to the cigar stand.

"Is he your father?" gasped Maida, incredulously.

"He is. Do you remember one day we thought a pickpocket ran through here? He nearly had apoplexy. That was the first time I saw you, and I had to go west on a busines trip for him the next day. I thought I would never get back here before some other fellow—Maida, what is there about me you don't like?" His voice was absurdly humble and entreating.

"Nothing," said Maida, promptly. "I thought——" She colored and broke off confusedly.

But three months later her father-



"MAIDA LOOKED AT HIM REPROACHFULLY."

in-law nearly laughed himself into apoplexy when his son, in spite of Maida's protests, told the story.

Bookcase Wanted to Preserve Federation Records

The bill to purchase the home of General McIntosh, at Indian Spring, is one of the most interesting which has come before the legislature, particularly to the women of the state who, as members of the D. A. R. organizations are anxious to see preserved, landmarks of historic importance.

The house is full of furniture, pictures, books and papers dating from General McIntosh's day and Mrs. A. H. Alfriend, chairman of the McIntosh memorial committee, requests through the paper that anyone who has a book case will contribute it to the home house for the better preservation of the valuable records.

Georgia's part in the revolution was as decisive at the end as Massachusetts was at the beginning, and the most stirring days of the state history centers about that time. Among the records held in the old house at Indian Spring is the following letter to General McIntosh from General Mitchell, agent for Indian affairs, and is dated November 15, 1820. As touching the times and state of affairs it is full of interest:

Dear Friend: I have your last letter, and I have also received one from the Little Prince and the Big Warrior by this day's mail.

I find the Big Warrior wants the treaty at Tuckabatchee, and the Little Prince wants it at Thlacotchea. When the commissioners of the United States wrote to me that they were appointed to hold a treaty, they asked my opinion, which would be the best place to hold it at. I wrote to them that your house, Thlacotchea, the agency, or the Indian Spring, would either of them answer, and when they had decided on the place, they must let me know. General Flournoy, one of the commissioners, soon afterwards wrote to me that it was necessary that they should spend as little money as possible, and as it would require a great deal of wagonage to send provisions to Chattahoochie, and as he understood, from some letters he had received, that you wished the treaty to be held at the springs, he, with the consent of Colonel Pickens, the other commissioner, had decided in favor of that place.

Now you know that this is a treaty called by the president and not by the Indians, and therefore, the president or his commissioners have the right to fix on the place. If the meeting was called by you, and you asked the president to send commissioners, you would have a right to name any place you pleased.

As the contract is now made for supplying the provision, it will defeat the treaty altogether to name another place now, and the president will not allow the Big Warrior to keep back the Indians from attending. If he does not choose to attend, he may stay at home, but I know the Little Prince and all the chiefs of the towns will attend if you tell them so. You know also, that everybody knows, that your influence is greater than any other man's in the nation, and if the Indians do not attend, you will be blamed as the cause of it.

I now write you as a friend, and wish you to hear what I say, and think seriously of the matter. I did hope to see you before the meeting, but am so engaged that I fear I cannot come to see you until within a few days of the day of meeting. You know you have many things to settle with the United States, and if the Warrior and Prince are obstinate, and will not attend, nor let the chiefs attend, all your business must remain unsettled. If you take my advice, and I never yet have advised you wrong, you will attend at the springs, and make all your head men attend. The Cherokees will have a separate treaty, but I hope your will have a number of their head men at your treaty.

I am, dear friend,
Your obedient servant,
D. B. MITCHELL.

To General McIntosh.

P. S. This letter is for yourself alone, and I will thank you to send by express to me, to let me know what you mean to do.

. . . . . .

REMARK.

At the time this letter was written and sent to McIntosh one was written and sent to the Little Prince and Big Warrior, expostulating with them on the contents of their letter of the 10th November, and urging their attendance, a copy of which was kept, but it is mislaid or I would insert it here.

From McIntosh I received the following in reply to the foregoing:

Mineral Springs, Nov. 25, 1820.

Dear General: I received your letter yesterday, dated the 15th instant, and I will, with pleasure, have all my red men ordered to meet at the appointed time and place by you and the commissioners of the United States.

I am content that this shall be the place. I have also given the Little Prince and Big Warrior orders to that effect.

I am, dear sir,
Very respectfully,
Your humble servant,
(Signed) WILLAM M'INTOSH.

To General D. B. Mitchel,
Agent of Indian affairs.

The gife of a book case will be greatly appreciated and the donor will have the privilege of knowing that he has been of assistance in helping to preserve a valuable par tof Georgia's history.

A Question of the Waist Line

What are we going to do with the waist line? It moves up and down and never stays put. The frock pictured shows one interesting way of treating the present big waist. The belt is high, and the loose, outstanding tunic flares out over the waist. The skirt, belt and jumper-like straps are of blue ratine, and the bodice is of white mull.

Keep Young As Long As You Can

KEEP your hair youthful looking. Don't let it grow old before your years. Faded or gray hair makes a woman look from 10 to 20 years older than if the hair were beautiful and lustrous.

Robinnaire Hair Dye

Is a wonderful scientific formula. It is a color restorer. Not a dangerous dye to bleach or change the original color of the hair, but a restorer which brings back to the hair its original color and beautiful sheen and softness. For a quarter of a century it has been used by women and men practically all over the world, and we have hundreds of unsolicited letters proving its merit. It does not stain the scalp nor make the hair sticky, and its use cannot be detected.

Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair; for sale by leading druggists and toilet goods departments; 75c. If you can not get it, sent by parcel post, 83c.

REPORTS OF SHOWERS IN TEXAS CAUSED DECLINE

Market in New York Closed 2 to 7 Points Lower Than the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Reports of showers southwest, unfavorable European trade advices and absence of demand from manufacturing sources early in the day caused cotton to decline to 4 points up, but prices quickly eased off with new crop positions selling 5 to 8 points lower.

Slight rallies following the official western belt forecast for fair weather except showers in the Texas coast belt, met the market easily again under Southern selling and was unsettled and wobbly with prices 3 to 10 points net lower.

Estimated receipts today 5,000 bales.

Trading was less active during the afternoon but prices ruled steadier at a rally of 3 or 4 points on covering and rumors that a bullish private crop report would be issued tomorrow.

Spot cotton quiet, middling upland 13.90; do. gulf 13.15; sales 300.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 14.—Cotton futures opened steady and unchanged to 2 points off, compared with yesterday's close. Cables were about as expected and the weekly bureau report on consumption for July of 486,246 bales in the United States caused a little flurry with the result that December went 5 points over yesterday's final figures. The scattered rains on the weather map in the west and the forecast of unsettled and showery weather for east Texas gave the market selling pressure and it commenced to work lower soon after the call. At the end of the first half hour prices were 6 to 8 points under yesterday's final.

Bulls brought out the fact that the consumption of cotton in the United States this season is already 5,321,000 bales with a month more larger than the total consumption last season. They further pointed out that the July report on consumption for July of 486,246 bales in the United States caused a little flurry with the result that December went 5 points over yesterday's final figures. The scattered rains on the weather map in the west and the forecast of unsettled and showery weather for east Texas

DIXIE MERCHANTS AT ATLANTA'S GREATEST BARBECUE

FEAST THAT WILL BECOME FAMOUS WAS GREAT BARBECUE WEDNESDAY

Crowd Numbered 1,400, by All Odds the Largest Gathering of Any of the Merchants' Conventions—Everybody Was Bountifully Cared for—Everybody Went Away Happy, Declaring the Occasion the Best Ever

A barbecue of barbecues!

A feast that will become famous.

A glorious, gladsome gathering of the windup week of the Southern Merchants' convention.

It would be easy to string alliteration on alliteration and to pile praise on praise, but that's enough. You get some idea of the greatness of the entertainment tendered the visiting merchants at Ponce de Leon springs Wednesday afternoon by their Atlanta hosts.

Crowd—the biggest ever attending a barbecue in Atlanta and one of the largest ever gathered for a similar occasion in Georgia.

Repast—bountiful, savory, satisfying. Everybody hungry and everybody supplied until perforce they exclaimed, "Hold, enough!"

Enjoyment—music, mingling, greetings, congratulations and merry-making. "Well, Atlanta, we'll hand it to you all right; you put over one of the best ever," said the guests as they departed.

"Of all our convention barbecues," said H. T. Moore, the convention secretary, "the one Wednesday was by all odds the most successful. Last year we entertained 1,000 guests. This year between 1,400 and 1,500 were present. It was one of the greatest affairs ever given in Atlanta or Georgia."

"Everybody had plenty to eat and drink," said J. R. Little, chairman of the barbecue committee. "Everybody went away delighted. We were overwhelmed with congratulations. We count it the biggest success we have ever scored."

In the number attending, in what was served them and in the spirit of the occasion, it was a success from the arrival of the specia cars with its load of merchants until the last person left the grounds.

The fifteen special cars started for Ponce de Leon from the center of the city shortly after 12 o'clock and by 1 o'clock there was a throng at the barbecue grounds that rivaled in numbers the crowds at the ball park across the street when a close series is being played.

Wedemeyer's band was already in action when most of the visitors arrived and when the time for serving the feast came every one had the real barbecue spirit.

There were no ropes strung around the kegs of liquid refreshments and these, scattered over the grounds, were where most of the crowd grouped themselves while waiting for the lowering of the lines about the pavilion and its rows of temptingly laid tables.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the word was given and every place at the tables was taken within thirty seconds. Such a number were on hand that there was a large overflow crowd which kept J. Lee Barnes and his assistants doing quick work to see that every one was supplied. Mr. Barnes was the caterer who prepared and served the feast.

Though attendance had exceeded expectations, there was enough of everything for everybody and for the next hour Atlanta's biggest and jolliest barbecue was on. The band kept busy, there was always another helping for all who wanted it, and the spigots on the kegs were not idle.

The feast the crowd disposed of consisted of 25 pigs, 25 lambs, 120 chickens, 100 gallons of Brunswick stew, 30 kegs of beer and cigars for every one.

Besides the merchants from all over the south brought here by the Southern Merchants' convention there were several hundred of Atlanta's traveling men on hand, playing host in helping the merchants enjoy the occasion as well as having a big time themselves. There were many ladies present.

J. R. Little, chairman of the barbecue committee, who has made such success at handling this part of the convention entertainment program each year, was everywhere at once, seeing that all went smoothly. Assisting him were R. K. Rambo, W. O. Stamps, W. L. Percy, E. M. Hudson, A. M. Wilkins and C. F. Barnwell.

The barbecue was planned to be the main feature of the two weeks' entertainment, and it was.

In commenting on the way the crowd was handled at the barbecue Wednesday, J. R. Little, chairman of the barbecue committee, declares that the thanks of all the entertainers are due to the Atlanta Brewing and Ice company for the splendid way in which they served refreshments to the crowd. The company sent a man especially to look after this feature of the entertainment.

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

Jack Dempsey, the Jackson, Ga., merchant, stopped off in Atlanta for the barbecue no his way home from his vacation in the Carolina mountains.

The younger salesmen at the Ragan-Malone company have showed up well in handling the visiting merchants. Carlton Hanes, who remembers starting off several of these younger fellows with little advisory talks at the time of their first trip, says he has to hustle now to keep them from outstripping him. Among those he gave first lessons to are W. W. Scott, A. R. Whitmeyer and Sam Hanes.

James H. Strickland, from Conford, Ga., enjoyed the barbecue immensely, but showed he did not enjoy it quite too much as he was able to spend the rest of the afternoon buying goods.

T. J. Lanier and his wife were visitors from Statham, Ga., who were buying holiday goods at the Dobbs & Wey company. Mrs. Lanier lending valuable aid in selecting the stock.

Pity the poor house salesman in times like these. It is not part of their duties to get out and show the merchants a good time. They must stick to the job every minute. Lum Daniel and Nat Gunter, of the Ragan-Malone house force have shown how close they can stick to business this week.

Claude Smith, of the A. M. Robinson company, is one of the salesmen who believes the great good of the convention is to become better acquainted personally with the merchants, and he practices the idea. He had fifteen of his merchant friends at the M. and M. club yesterday after the barbecue and was assisted in entertaining them by R. L. Smith and "Dad" Rosser, of the Robinson sales staff.

A. P. Woodward, from Keysville, Ga., attended his first merchants' convention barbecue yesterday, but declares now he will never miss another.

L. E. Tate, from Tate, Ga., says yesterday's barbecue was the best thing Atlanta has given the merchants yet.

E. M. Harrell and Warren Butler, here from Cadwell, Ga., will spend several days at Indian Spring before returning home.

P. A. Leonard, buyer for J. P. Heard & Co., of Vienna, Ga., and one of the visitors in the wholesale district this morning, states his firm has been buying a large part of its goods in Atlanta for twenty years, but that starting this season they will buy everything here.

C. C. Jenkins, vice president of the Chipley Mercantile company, of Chipley, Ga., big supply merchants, is now lined up as an Atlanta buyers on hats though in years past he has gone east for that part of his stock. He was at the Brown, Perry & Greene Co. this morning selecting fall stock.

Z. C. Allison, from Sumner, Ga., is one of the prominent merchants who spent this morning winding up his buying.

The upper left hand picture shows a group of feasters in the pavilion. In the lower left hand corner appears another group under the trees. In the upper right hand corner is shown some of the barbecue committee. From left to right; J. R. Little, chairman; W. L. Percy, R. K. Rambo and F. M. Hudson. A section of the crowd is shown in the lower right corner entering the pavilion when the ready call was sounded. The small picture at the bottom shows W. O. Stamps, another member of the barbecue committee.

The Conyers, Ga., delegation attended the barbecue with Jeff Hollingsworth, the salesman who calls Conyers home next to Atlanta, towing them and acting as a special committee of one to see they had a particularly good time.

Conyers was represented last week by several of these merchants who made the trip in yesterday especially for the 'cue. Among those present from Conyers were R. L. Huff, W. K. Downs, Allen D. Summers and R. O. Galley.

Secretary H. T. Moore was everywhere at once. No detail that would contributs to the comfort of the guests escaped his eye. He declared he wore blisters on his feet in his trips about the grounds.

President Bolling H. Jones was early on hand and had his hearty, characteristic welcome for all the arriving guests.

BIG TREAT WILL BE FRIDAY'S BALL GAME

Journal's Sporting Editor Tells Merchants of Coming Atlanta-Chattanooga Contest

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

With the club just home from a most successful road trip, which marks the final stand in the campaign for the 1913 Southern league pennant, and a numoer of new faces in the line-up, there is much in store for the hundreds of southern merchants who will be on hand at the Atlanta-Chattanooga game on Friday afternoon. It is also Ladies' day and the fair sex will be right there to join with the visitors in giving the home club a big sendoff.

It is always a gala event at Ponce de Leon when visitors are entertained, but this time the ceremonies are a bit larger than usual. It is not often that a ball club of championship caliber is making a final stand against a most hated rival in the closest of races for a league pennant when visitors take charge of a park, but this time every condition is ideal for some real baseball.

There are many features of interest at a Southern league ball game, but visitors do not know just where to find them owing to their unfamiliarity with the players on the rival clubs. One team may carry the leading base stealer, another the best run getter and so on, and yet these facts cannot be appreciated by those who do not know the players. So here goes a few gentle hints that may be of interest:

In left field for Atlanta is to be found one Tommy Long, who is the leading run getter of the circuit. Next season he may be seen in the big show.

In center for the same club will be seen Harry Welchonce, who has made more safe hits than any other player in the country.

In the other outfield there will be Jacinto Calvo, a young Cuban, and on the Cracker infield at first, Joe Agler, who goes to Jersey City next season; at second, Wallace Smith, who has been sold to Washington, and at third, Harry Holland, a young collegian, who is setting the woods on fire by his sensational work.

Probably the two greatest players with the Lookout bunch are Gabby Street, the catcher who came into fame by catching a ball dropped from the top of the Washington monument and catching Walter Johnson's benders for a season. Then there is Harry Covelesicle, the Pole, who once beat the New York Giants out of a pennant and next season goes to the Detroit Americans.

Prough Loser After Taking Ten in a Row

Carl Thompson Came Back and Baffled Team Which Gave Him Pink Slip—Smith Hit Home Run Drive

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 14.—Bill Prough's winning streak was broken and rudely jostled Wednesday by the Crackers, Carl Thompson the ex-Baron turning the trick.

In the second the party given to Prough was opened up. Welchonce got on on an error and Wally Smith lifted one out past center field, trotting around the bases.

In the fourth again the Crackers nested against Prough's delivery for three straight singles. Holland, Holtz and Chapman doing the work. Prough, however, fanned Thompson and Agler, and everything would have gone well for him had he not forgotten the location of the plate and walked Long, forcing Holland in.

The Barons got their share of the day's runs in the fifth. One man was down. Elliam was pinked. Carroll singled to center and Elliam went to third on the hit. Prough whiffed. Carroll and Elliam scored when Marcan's hit got by Holtz.

Prough's record is now no better than that of Covaleskie since Atlanta has shattered it. Much of his defeat, however, was due to the errors made by the Birmingham team.

Double Header With Lookouts As an Opener

Crackers Back at Ponce de Leon After Successful Road Trip—New Faces in Line-up on Thursday

Atlanta's home stay opens today with a double bill, in which the Lookouts are to be the protagonists. A large crowd of fans are expected to be at Ponce de Leon in case the clouds do not carryout their threat, to see the conquering Crackers come.

The team, right now is on a winning streak, and are at the most critical time of the season, when a continuance of their winning means that they overtake the leaders and a break means uter darkness.

Billy Smith will most probably give his new recruit from Mauon a tryout in one of the games. Voss was delivered by Macon in good shape, in fact last Saturday he won a game from Charleston by superior pitching, and is ready to jump right into the lineup. Conzelman will probably work the other game as it is his regular turn, Lefty Love, may, however, be used. In addition to the new pitcher, Smith will work out his new outfielder Calvo.

Calvo is already in town, and in shape for the fray.

For the Lookouts Grimes will be on the hill in the first and with Sommers the probable choice for the second. Gabby Street will receive one game, and as it is Lookout's first appearance in Atlanta since signing Pat Graham, the ex-Cracker, he probably be given a chance to work one against his old teammates behind the bat.

Final Cleanup Gave Atlanta Great Record

Team Dropped but 4 of the 11 Road Games and Now Stands Good Chance to Be in Running for Flag

Once more the Crackers wend their way homeward after a successful road trip. Coming from behind after they had lost four out of six games, they have won five straights on the road and made it seven out of eleven.

They return home three games behind Montgomery in second place and five and a half games behind Mobile in first place and during their prolonged home stay, which lasts until the end of the season, September 6, they meet both of these teams in a series of games.

It has been a long uphill fight for the Atlanta club to stay within striking distance of first place, with the various and sundry happenings and reversals of form shown by the players who have from time to time dropped out of the Cracker line-up, but thanks to the willingness of the association to back Smith, and his willingness to go out after players, they return home with a team which is going at top speed, and which, without further reversal of form should overtake the leaders of the league.

The pitchers are going as well as they have gone this season, and Holland was the very man to plug the infield gap. The only weakness which was shown on the trip was the inability of Holtz to hit a left-hander. Smith has now replaced him with Calvo, the Cuban outfielder who is the property of the Washington Americans.

This new lineup put up a beautiful fight on the road. They not only won seven out of eleven games, but in every of their games they played errorless ball and only made seven errors on the trip, averaging one to the game. In the eleven games the Atlanta pitchers gave up runs or an average of a little over 7 to a game. Atlanta got 105 hits or nearly 10 to a game.

Here is the record of the team in detail:

Again Geers Wins M. and M.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 14.—"Pop" Geers won his sixth M. and M. when, after five hard fought heats he landed Rausen' victor in the classic stake. Tenara, the Kentucky mare winner this year of three big stakes, could not withstand the terrific rushes of Geer's gelding, and having ric rushes of Geer's gedlink and having taken first place in two heats was unable thereafter to do better than second.

Cabel won the 2:10 pace and Plowed Direct the 2:05 pace, both in straight heats, while Dr. Burns, Jr., captured the 2:08 pace by capturing the first heat.

No M. and M. in recent years furnished more thrilling sport than Wednesday's renewal, Tenara, in the fifth heat, led all the way, but had to be driven out to win from Santee Maid by half a length. Judson Girl and Pengens finished noses apart four lengths behind. Tenara repeated in the second heat, but won with less effort. Rausens broke at the far turn and was a poor sixth.

The excitement came in the next heat. Tenara and Judson Girl were half a dozen lengths ahead of the field from the start until the stretch was entered. Above half way down the straightaway. Rausens shot out of the bunch in a marvelous display of speed, came on even terms with the leaders, showed in front of the tiring Tenara and beat her to lithe wire by the narrowest of margins.

Rausens went out in front in the next heat, but fell back to fourth place before the half mile post was reached. In that position he remained until the way down the stretch when Geers again sent him through to another close decision. Geers and Andrews had no competition in the final heat. They sent their charges out ahead, the mare showing a trifle in the lead. Nearing the finish, Rausens once more responded to the master driver's call and flashed ahead.

The victor is owned by S. E. De Ridder, of Louisville, Ky.

Batting Figures

The beginning of the road trip found Harry Holland without an average at all. The winning finds him within one point of Welchonce, the team's leader. Three Crackers are hitting .300, and Wallie Smith is close behind with .294. These figures included the game with the Barons Wednesday:

Siberian Wildcat Out After Hard Matches

Sporting Editor The Journal, City:

Dear Sir: In behalf of my boy, "Young Rosa," who fights under the name of the Siberian Wildcat, I wish to state that he would like to meet any lightweight in the city. Cyclone Levy preferred. The Wildcat, who is without a doubt the prettiest fighting man ever developed in the local colony, has only had three bouts in private, and won each one of them decisively. In his last bout he showed wonderful foot work and gameness. I think such boys as Mike Sachi, Terry Nelson, Eddie Hanlon or Cyclone Levy would be easy picking for him.

Thanking you for space in your paper, I am,

Respectfully yours,
S. A. (YEG) KAPLAN, Manager.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—The annual meeting of the American baseball league will be held in Chicago in October instead of at the usual time in December, according to an announcement by President B. B. Johnson. The earlier date was chosen on account of the world's tour of the Chicago club.

Another B. Smith Star Going to Major Leagues

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 14—Duke Duncan, the Dallas outfielder who at present is claimed both by the Boston and Philadelphia Nationals was released here by Billy Smith, in the spring of 1912 because of a bad arm.

Duncan came to the locals from Columbus, S. C., having led the Sally league in hitting the preceding year. He looked like a million dollars in practice and Smith started the season with him as it was thought that his arm was merely sore from weakness. It showed no improvement, however, and Smith was forced to send him to Dallas, where he has played star ball for two seasons.

Duncan admitted before leaving that his arm was bad and stated that it was due to the fact that in the fall of 1911 while at Columbia he got out in center field before a game and cut loose three or four to the plate for a big league scout. Duncan stated that his arm was cold at the time and that it snapped. From that time on it was sore.

It was with great reluctance that Smith released the outfielder as he stated then that he would make a star if he recovered his arm. Apparently from the fight which the Phillies and the Braves are making he has done both.

Many Claimed White Could Have Put Out Whitney While Others Were Equally as Sure Frank Was Too Clever

Charlie White, who has done his full share towards putting Chicago on the boxing map, Wednesday night earned an undisputed ten-round decision over Frank Whitney in their match at the auditorium. While the decision which went to White was very plain, there was no great margin between the work of the two, Whitney always being right on the job for every rush.

In getting away with the decision White did not have an easy time by any means. Whitney was in the very best of shape and was able to mix it or stand off and box at long range. White on the other hand seemed to tire after a fast exchange of blows and was not able to follow the several advantages he gained in some of the clinches. Just the reverse was true of Whitney, when he appeared to be getting the hardest blows he came back strongest, and this alone made the match most interesting and fast.

There were those in the audience who claimed to believe that White could have stopped Whitney at any time he wished, and on the other hand there were just hundreds who were quite sure that Whitney could have stuck around all night and been ready for anything White could dish out. The main surprise of the evening to many was that White did not put the Fighting Carpenter away. These fans who expected such a termination of the match had witnessed White put out Jake Abel in some two rounds, and figuring Abel just as good as Whitney they were surprised when Frank did not do the same trick. But the Whitney who faced White Wednesday night was in the pink of condition and a far cleverer boxer than Jake Abel ever dared be.

COULD HIT HARDER.

In but few of the rounds did White have any edge over Whitney, and this edge alone came through the fact that he executed a harder punch than the Cedar Rapids boy. Whitney showed just as much cleverness as the Chicago boy, was far in the lead when it came to leading and was there with the condition. White is admittedly very clever but he has not yet found on Whitney, who seems to adapt himself to any style of fighting.

Whitney's greatest and only advantage over Whitney came towards the end of the match when he got into two or three clinches and severely punished Whitney. His left uppercut worked like a piston in these places and it was hard for Whitney to check it. However, Frank was always willing to mix it and go right back at his man.

For clever blocking, good feinting and crack footwork there has been no match ever held here than ranked in the same class. Both boys are up on the scientific end of the game and what they didn't show the fans was not worth knowing. Each was afraid the other would slip over some good blow and were always trying to force the other to lead so a good chance for a punch could be secured.

Charlie Lee and Kid Young got back at each other in the semi-wind-up and again Lee proved the victor. Young at times showed flashes of his old time form but lack of condition told on him and in the fourth he was all but out when Count Castro stopped the match. Young was doing nothing but covering for when the knockout to Battling O'Leary in their match.

Definite Ideas of GOLF Putting At Golf

If "faint heart never won fair lady," weak putting never got a ball safely down to the bottom of the cup. Every putt should be struck with the avowed intention at least of being up and over the hole. Every golfer has heard "never up, never in," until he is probably so tired of seeing it in print or otherwise that he feels like crying "Murder!" whenever he comes across long distances, which it never could do if it had reached the hole.

It is just as easy to hit every putt strong enough to get up to the hole as the half hearted, indifferent ones that half way meaning or substitute will do. Nothing seems so hopeless as the man who must, in his heart, think he is going to miss every putt he goes after.

STRAIGHT DRIVE.

HOLLAND MAKING HISTORY AT THE HITTING GAME

Much in baseball hinges on the proper combination, and when Atlanta lost the services of Captain Whitey Alperman, it looked as if she had suffered an unbearable blow, but the lad, Jeb Holland, seems to be the proper link in the infield to keep the combination up to a winning stride.

Holland has been working with the other fielders, and has been working well. The Birmingham papers say that he can field the ball, and in addition to this he returns home from the road trip with a batting average of .327 for the 16 games in which he has participated.

This hitting has all been done on the road, as Holland's first few games at home were played during the time in which he was being "broken in," and was slightly nervous.

In the last series with Birmingham Holland reached the climax of his hitting, getting on ten straight times in the first two games. In these ten at bats he got five hits out of six at bats, getting on once on an error. The other four times he went to first base without getting credit for an at bat, being hit twice and walking twice.

Here is his record for the road trip:

Water Sports At East Lake

The water sports committee of the Atlanta Athletic club have busied themselves and arranged a most excellent program of sports for Saturday, August 23. It is to be known as water sports day and will include swimming, canoe and boat racing, fancy diving followed by the usual dance.

It has always been customary to hold a water carnival at East lake each season and the one this year gives promise of being by far the largest and best ever attempted. There will include more events and there will be more of the sport loving members interested.

This year will be never before the members of the club who indulge in swimming have taken a greater liking to the sport than ever before. Hundreds are to be found in the water each day and many have taken to fancy diving and long distance swimming with the result that they have become quite proficient at this end of the game.

Among the best swimmers at the club are to be found Walter Dunbar, William Logan, Pie Weaver, Walter Locke, Henry Hull, George Plant, Wilbur Francis, L. S. Cone and others too numerous to mention.

There are also a number of ladies who have taken up the game and are now swimming up a streak. Among these are Alexa Sterling, Nora Sterling, Lida Nash, Ellen Keel, Regina Rambo, Helen Thorn and Elaine Fielder.

Eugene S. Kelly, one of the champion swimmers, divers and canoe artists in the city, has charge of the sports committee and is working overtime to make it a go. With this water lover showing his interest in the matter it is almost most likely be a big success.

Here is the program:

Fifty yards, 100 yards, one-half mile swimming races and canoe races for men.

Fifty yards, one-half mile, swimming races and canoe races for ladies.

Mixed rowing races and fancy diving. Open to all club members and their lady friends. No entrance fee. "Get in this dubs."

Fifty cents loses soon. To enter give your name to Coach Joe Bean now.

McDermott in Best of Trim

GARDEN CITY, Aug. 14.—Three of the American golfers who took part in the British open golf championship at Holyoke, a few wooks ago, were among the leading players at the finish of the first half of the 72-hole medal play contest which began Wednesday at Salisbury links, for the eighth annual open championship of the Metropolitan Golf association. Those are John J. McDermott, Atlantic City, N. J., national open champion, and Tom McNamara, of Boston, who won the Metropolitan title last year at Apawamis.

The weather was against low scoring. While the professional record for the Salisbury course is 65, the best score made was 71 by McDermott, who made both rounds at that figure.

Jack Hebens, of Englewood, N. J., led the amateurs with 152. Other amateur scorers were: Fred Herreshoff, Garden City, 164, and Max Behr, Baltusrol, N. J., 169.

CLEMSON HAS OLD STARS RETURNING FOR FOOTBALL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C., Aug. 14.—Joe Douthit, of Pendleton, the popular manager of the Clemson college football "Tigers" for the coming season, was on the campus today looking after football matters for the season of 1913, the opening of which is scarcely a month off now, and gave this correspondent an interview in which the following "dope" was found.

The prospects for an extra good football season loom unusually bright for Clemson this fall. he "Tigers" have a strong schedule, one of the south's best coaches, and practically all of last year's players will come back. Only three of the wearers of the football "C" will not return. To fill their places we have the pick of last year's subs and scrubs and four class teams, to say nothing of new men who will enter Clemson for the first time this fall. The strength of these new men is as yet unknown, but there are sure to be a number of good men among the untried three hundred.

Of last year's varsity who return there is Wells, who was by far the best full back in the state last season, and who will be playing his third year. James, the clever quarter, will be playing his last year, and only those who have experienced his fierce offence know how to appreciate or express his value. Pressley, the other backfielder, completes one of the south's strongest backfields. Among those who are to make trouble for a place in the backfield are Stribling, Walker, Major, Durant, Gilmore, Brown, and Reeves, all of whom have seen hard work and have been star backs in many a class or scrub game. Incidentally it might be added, the weights of these men range from 160 to 190. It may be too early to say it very loud yet, but there seems to be some trouble brewing for Carolina, Auburn, Tech, Alabama, and the rest.

HAVE GOOD LINE.

And, oh, yes, there is a line, which is coming back strong too, at least two men who can play and want to play each line position. There is Carson and Parker, who played center all last year and it hasn't yet been settled which is the better. Of course both will be still better this season. As guards, Schilletter, who in this hot weather weighs 204, will be one of the bulwarks, the other of last year's guards, hasn't decided yet about returning, but in case he doesn't, there will be West, who is heavier than Schilletter and has two years of scrub and class ball; also Kendrick, who tips the weigsts at 190. Brandon, who offers the same opposition to the center of gravity; and, there will be others.

At one tackle stands Gandy, the "Tiger" captain and veteran of the gridiron. This season marks his fourth year of college ball. Last year he was the fastest man in the line. The other tackle will be to fill, but that's easy. McDaniel, a sub of 1912, will put in a strong bid for this place, and A. B. Carson (the center mentioned above is J. S.,) who was debarred under the S. I. A. A. rules last year, will undoubtedly also make a determined fight for this place this season. Littlejohn will make this fight for position threecornered.

Last, but not least, come the ends. It can't yet be said who will play those two important positions. Last season there were about six of them. Caughman, a fast, hard-working, heady boy, will probably hold one end of this strong string. Then for the other, there are Lewis, one of the best forward pass receivers ever in the game and as fast as a streak; Stribling, another who catches them well, but is hard to catch himself; Randle, an old Porter star, and a valuable man at Clemson last year, who will most likely make his presence felt.

This is the way the team looks now, and with the others of last year's teams and the many new men who will appear, no doubt there will be "some fighting" for places on the "Tiger" line-up this fall.

To coach this aggregation are Bob Williams and "Rip" Major. Williams comes to Clemson holding the entire confidence of the faculty, the alumni, and the students. He has coached Clemson's "Tigers" twice in years previous, and his ability is well known throughout the south. It was he who coached Carolina's "Gamecocks" in 1912 when they defeated famous Heisman team, and everybody in these parts expects the tables to be turned this year, he having Carolina and Tech, the latter now coached by Heisman, go down before Williams' Clemson Tigers.

Below is the revised schedule for the season:

October 4—Davidson at Clemson college, S. C.

October 11—University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

October 18—Auburn at Clemson college, S. C.

October 30—University of South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.

November 6—University of Georgia at Augusta, Ga.

November 8—The Citadel at Charleston, S. C.

November 15—Mercer University at Macon, Ga.

November 27—Georgia Tech at Atlanta, Ga.

Lois Gets Away With Villa Rica

VILLA RICA, Ga., Aug. 14.—The Lois ball club took a pretty game from Villa Rica Saturday, by the score of 6 to 5. It was anybody's game until the last man was out in the ninth. Johnson caught one of the prettiest games for Lois that has been seen here in some time. His pegging was perfect.

The features of the game was the batting of Rogers for Lois, getting a hit that won the game. White played good ball in rightfield, Robinson worked well but could not win from the strong Lois team. His stop of Rogers' line drive was the prettiest play of the game.

LARRY GAMES BEST HITTER

—FRANK SCHULTE.

Lajoie is the real king pin hitter, according to Outfielder Schulte, of the Chicago Cubs, himself somewhat of a slugger. Schulte was interviewed by Harold D. Johnson, of the Chicago Record-Herald. Here is the result:

Quoting F. Wildfire Schulte, the home-run kid. "There's hitters, and again there's LaJoie.' Not that the Cub star is coyly making fresh with the club swinging abilities of certain present day greats, towit, Heinie Zim, Joe Jackson, Tyrus Cobb, Hans Wagner, Tristam Speaker et al, for Wildfire is a knowing cuss. He's hep to the fact that these are dangerous birds at any and all stages of the milling. He has seen them all, lamped 'em carefully and makes bold to proclaim the reformed hack driver from Woonsocket, R. I., the master malletier of all time.

One of those fanfares always in season when the elements go amuck and weep copiously, converting big league battlefields into temporary natatoriums, gave Schulte his cue to compliment Larry.

It isn't a case of hero worshiping with Schulte. He's a big leaguer who counts his pals in legion. He is rated one of the truly greats in affairs pertaining to the game of swat. Once only in all his days as a national pastimer has Wildfire sat in when King Larry was batting. It happened down years ago.

The Cubs were off that afternoon, being scheduled to catch a rattler leaving at midnight for St. Louis. Schulte's memory failed him when he tried to name the White Sox flinger opposing the Naps. Whoever he was, he sure got a fine combed mauling. Said Wildfire reminiscently, warming up to his recital:

"I'd heard a lot about the man Lajoie and grabbed the chance to look him over. As I remember, he batted fourth, and he had his first time up in the first inning. I was sitting in the stand where I could draw a bead on everything aimed at the Frenchman. Careless like he ambled up to the plate, swinging his slap-stick like a drum major on parade doing a trick stuff with his baton. He didn't miss a trick that time, but I did. I watched carefully, yet he didn't seem to set himself or take the tie hold so common among batters. Instead he stood up there as if he might be talking with the arbitrator.

"Whoever was pitching took a wind-up then—Zowie!!! Down the right field line ninety-mile an hour and up against the bleachers. That's what he did to that ball. Two innings passed and I saw Larry prancing to bat, carelessilke, the same as before. The same thing happened, every move the same, only this time he tripled down the left field line, butting his brand on the bleachers.

"Just to show he had a change of pace the big fellow poled a double to center his third time out, and to top off the exhibition, he singled past short in the fourth trial. By that time I was sure enough pulling for Larry. He had shown me how to crack that agate.

"The remarkable part of Lajoie's batting lies in the fact that he seldom gets an infield hit of the bunt variety. None of that stuff. It's a thousand to one shot he will lay on the pill every time and, after all, that's the sort of batting the fan wants. His poise at bat, his graceful yet terrific drive, his ability to clout all kinds of pitching and to keep on hitting about the .300 mark for seventeen years, with but one or two slumps below that notch, entitles him to a position at the top of the heap—the greatest natural slugger since the days of Ed Delahanty, who rolled up an average of .367 for twelve years.

"Infield taps by naturally fast men like Cobb may be all right and serve to get the old average padded to a high figure, but I'm one of the common herd that always pulls for the big wallop."

Kestler Wins Series Over Camilla Club

KESTLER, Ga., Aug. 14.—The Kestler baseball team returned last night from Camilla, where they took two out of three games. Camilla won the first game by a score of 10 to 3, the game being called on account of a wrangling in the eighth inning.

Kestler	3	7	4
Camilla	10	12	4

Batteries: Slappey and Jones; Mayo and Orline.

On Friday a double-heacer was played. Kid Blanton pitched both games for Kestler and merely toyed with Camilla at all stages of both games.

First game:

Score:	R.	H.	E.
Kestler	7	10	2
Camilla	5	8	2

The second game was a much closer affair, Blanton being forced to extend himself to the limit. Pittman, of Thomasville, played wonderful ball for Kestler, getting the only two runs and two hits. Kimball played grand ball in both games.

Kestler	2	6	2
Camilla	0	4	3

Batteries: Blanton and Kimball; Twitty and Orline.

Hard Job to Enter Majors

Manager George Stovall, of the St. Louis Browns, was a member of five different minor league clubs in 1903, four of which disbanded before their season was over.

In 1904 Stovall wrote to every manager in the American association circuit asking for a job and offering to pay his own railroad expenses for a trial. No answer was forthcoming. But Stovall secured a job elsewhere, and four years later was considered one of the best infielders in the American league.

These incidents show Stovall's determination to succeed in baseball. Determination to succeed is a handy little thing to have around when one is managing the Browns. There isn't any city on the circuit where it could be more useful except New York, and the Browns didn't move out of the cellar position until Stovall got on the job last year.

When Owner R. M. Hedges signed Stovall it was with the distinct understanding that he be given time to develop a club. Stovall sat down with paper and pencil and showed the owner where the club was outclassed at that time in nearly every position. Hedges admitted the "corn" but told Stovall to get to work to change conditions.

The St. Louis American league club is considered stronger than it was last season. Many critics thought it would be a mighty troublesome factor for the leaders this season, although hardly conceding it a place in the first division. It is mighty troublesome at times, but the other clubs also have strengthened, which indirectly nullifies in part the work of Stovall. But building up a tail-ender is slow business and there is no reason to believe Owner Hedges regrets his choice, for the Browns have some promising youngsters who may figure as parts of a reconstructed wheel in time.

VETERANS ARE PASSING FROM WORK IN MAJORS

Cy Seymour Was Once Rated as Among the Best—Now He Is a Has-Been and Out of the Circle

Cy Seymour has received his unconditional release from the Boston club, and thus passes, probably forever, one of the big league's most unique and interesting veterans. He was let out as being all in a couple of years ago, but Stallings took him on this spring, figuring that he could still bat, even if he could no longer cover the outfield with any special speed.

So old Seymour hung on during his last lease of big league life, and was sent in as pinch hitter on numerous occasions. The old eye wasn't there, though, and after achieving thirteen hits in seventy-four bats, he was told that he might go his way.

Seymour's career was one of baseball's many romances. Originally, he was a minor league pitcher, a left-hander of deadly speed and terrible wildness, which in the smaller circles scared the batters foolish and really helped a pitcher rather than otherwise. New York bought him, but had to stop using him, lest many gents go down before his shoots and find a procession walking slowly behind them two days later. The Giants loaned Seymour to Comiskey, but he was too wild for the Sox, and reverted to New York.

Then it was discovered that his wildness was mainly due to his small hands. Seymour is a big, raw-boned man, just the type that would be supposed to have enormous hands, and yet his palms are as small and dainty as a girl's—far too small to grip a pill and give it proper control. It was also found that he could hit, and that he had ideas of playing the outfield. To the field he went and as an outfielder he lasted many years. He soon developed into a mighty hitter, and, when with the Reds, was the terror of the hostile pitchers—also of his teammates if they happened to offend him.

New York bought him back for large money, and he was a conspicuous member of the Giants through several campaigns. Next to Merkle's famous break a bone by Seymour attracted most attention during the thrilling windup of 1908. McGraw had ordered Seymour to play way deep when Tinker came to bat. Seymour had figured that Joe would hit a short line drive, and came in close, whereupon Tinker potted a three-bagger over his head and that three-bagger turned the tide.

Seymour was not a modern type of player, but a fine example of the old school—a fine hitter, good fielder, and seldom thinker. He lasted a long time, and is well on in years as ball players go.—Exchange.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Fancy Versus Commercial Poultry

ONE thing that has kept the people from making more money out of poultry than they would have done otherwise is on account of being so particular about breeding their birds strictly to feather or color, always striving to get the fancy show specimens rather than paying more attention to size, constitution and laying qualities. A hen's actual value is estimated according to the actual number of eggs she can lay, or by wha she can produce in strictly fancy show specimens, and the best and most carefully bred birds will not produce one fancy show specimen in twenty-five, and we haven't enough buyers who are willing to pay what it will to produce a fancy show bird. If the breeder would pay more attention to constitutional vigor, type and laying qualities rather than color and build up a family of fowls to produce eggs they would get by far better results than to lay so much stress and pay so much attention to show points. There will always be enough people who will breed thoroughbreds, use special matings and attempt to breed for color rather than egg-production, and to these breeders you can always look for color to add to any thoroughbred flock, and just so long as a flock of fowls that represent any distinct variety keeps within bounds as to color or breeds anyways like a reasonable uniform lot of fowls in color that is all that the average person should ask for or desire. You should always have in sight the object of eggs if that is what you are breeding for, and not what will convert a given amount of food into as many pounds of flesh as quickly as possible and something that will make you a profit.

The breeders of short horn cattle use to be cranky on the subject of color and most of them preferred a rich red in color, but in this day and time of close competition and where the actual dollars and cents are looked for short horn breeders pay absolutely no attention to color, and animals of this breed come pure white, spotted, roan, red and all sorts of colors, but the breeder always has in sight in his breeding animals good hams, good backs and good heart girth, the three important things that sell for the highest price to the butcher. The butcher cares absolutely nothing for color and when he buys from you a hog or a cow he only pays you for the actual weight and pays you for the amount of money that he can cut out of the animal. This same thing would apply to chickens. Just so you have type and a reasonable likeness in color this is the main object and the only thing that will bring dollars and cents for the poultry breeder. A hen's actual worth is measured according to the number of eggs she lays or the pounds of flesh she can put on, by the same token commercial use than the fancy hen bred from a fancy standpoint that produces only a reasonable amount of fancy show birds.

When the breeders of this country learn that they must produce laying hens and weights of hens rather than fancy show birds sooner will we begin to make alarger per cent of profit out of the poultry industry. However, while I realize that to the fancier we must give the credit of taking enough time to produce a two-hundred egg per year hen and the hen that will put on the most pounds of flesh, still there are too many people trying to breed these show specimens rather than a good commercial hen. The farmer and the average breeder in the city are now keeping chickens for what they can actually earn for them in dollars and cents, and as long as feed sells at the price it does in the south we cannot hope to get a good per cent of profit out of our efforts unless we keep chickens that will produce eggs and meat for us. Of course every breeder should keep thoroughbreds to do this as they pay by far better than scrubs, but in fancy too much attention has been paid strictly to color and the useful or utility part of the average chicken has been neglected. We have enough people breeding thoroughbred fowls in the south so that they can afford to pay more attention to egg-production and for meat production rather than for strictly fancy, and when we get the foolish ideas out of our heads of breeding all strictly fancy specimens and get down to business and produce more hens that will lay eggs and hens that will produce pounds of flesh the sooner will we begin to realize more revenue from our poultry work.

Yours very truly,

J. D. V.

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

I am informed that you have a book on raising beef cattle and hogs. Will you please tell me where I can get one and price of same.

Lumber City, Ga.

ANSWER.

I haven't a book on beef cattle or hogs. I can get for you for $1.50 a splendid work on this subject covering the necessary details connected with this line of work. This book is invaluable and well worth many times its price to any library. One of the best methods for a person to become posted on this work is to subscribe for the Breeders' Gazette, the best weekly publication in the United States on this subject. The price is only $1.50 per year and each week it is well worth the year's subscription. I have been reading this paper for twenty-four years and it has been a regular schooling to me in the shape of live stock and farming. No farmer or live stock breeder should be without this splendid work.

QUESTION.

Will you kindly advise me what to do with ducks that seem to be weak in their legs. They eat all right, but tumble over on their backs and can not get up and seem that it is hard to get a good breath. They are about two and one-half months old. They have been so affected only a few days. Thanking you in advance for your advice, I am,

MRS. W. H. H.

Atlanta, Ga.

ANSWER.

The ducks evidently have been overfed and for the want of exercise and a variety of feed are suffering with indigestion. By giving a variety of feed, some exercise and changing their feed you can remove the trouble. They should have an abundance of green food and should not be fed very much rich, concentrated feed during the hot summer days. Bran, shorts and corn meal, equal parts with their equal of boiled oats and alfalfa meal mixed one-half and half, is a splendid feed for them. It gives bulk, satisfies their appetite and produces growth at the same time, and by feeding this along with plenty of tender green food you can remedy the trouble and get your ducks in good shape.

How to Avoid those Pains and Distress Which so Many Mothers Have Suffered

It is a pity more women do not know of Mother's Friend. This remedy softens the muscles, enables them to expand without strain and enables women to go through the ordeal without pain, nausea, morning sickness or other dreaded symptoms so familiar to many mothers.

There is no foolish diet to harass the mind. Thousands of women no longer resign themselves to the thought that sickness and distress are natural. They know better, for in Mother's Friend they have found how easy it is to banish all those dreaded experiences.

It is a subject every woman should be familiar with, and even though she may not require such a remedy, she will now and then meet some prospective mother to whom a word in time about Mother's Friend will come as a wonderful blessing. This famous remedy is sold by all druggists, and is only $1.00 a bottle. It is for external use only. Write today to The Bradfield Regulator Co., 227 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a most valuable book to expectant mothers.

witness stand at his trial. Friends expect to dissuade him from this, however, should her condition improve sufficiently, as they believe that the governor's case will be materially strengthened when she tells her story to the court.

In the opinion of some of the governor's friends, the court of impeachment will never sit in judgment on his case, and Mrs. Sulzer will be saved the ordeal of examination at the hands of counsel for political interests bitter toward her husband.

"Mrs. Sulzer, far from actuig with intent to do wrong, was entirely unconscious of the gravity of her offense when she bought stocks with a part of her husband's campaign contributions," asserted a close friend of the Sulzer family today. "On the contrary, she thought she was doing a sensible thing. Her husband was involved in debt when he began his campaign for the governorship.

"He had saved nothin gduring the years he was a representative at Washington. He is not a business man and his wife thought she was entirely within her rights in providing for the future, by putting away something for a rainy day, even without his knowledge."

The governor's friends, who believe that the court of impeachment will never convene to try his case, base their opinion on the tentative plan of his counsel to have the courts review the constitutionality of the impeachment proceedings prior to September 18. This view, they assert, probably will be started by mandamus proceedings to compel obedience to his instructions by the first department head who refuses to recognize the claim that he is still governor.

There will be no undignified fight for the governship, according to statements by both claimants for the office. Mr. Glynn has announced that there will be "no circus or military maneuvers about occupying the executive chamber.

E. Cady Herrick, chief of the large staff of Mr. Sulzer's counsel, declared last night that there will be "no physical scramble" on his client's part.

Messrs. Herrick and Hotchkiss associates have issued emphatic instructions to Mr. Sulzer that he must, under no conditions, discuss his case for publication. Their insistence that he reserve his story for telling at his trial, has resulted in his absolute silence.

Mrs. Sulzer's illness is so serious as to be regarded as critical, according to announcement made today by Governor Sulzer's secretary. Two additional specialists were summoned from New York today to attend her.

When Governor Sulzer reached the executive chamber in the capitol this morning he said:

"Everybody in the state of New York ought to be with me in this fight."

SULZER REFRESHED.

He seemed refreshed by his night's rest and was in excellent spirits. He walked slowly up the winding walk leading to the capitol's main entrance, smiling and bowing to the hundred or so persons who recognized him.

"You know we had a conference over at the People's house last night, my lawyers and I," the governor said to the reporters. "They made me promise not to talk. There is not a word that I can tell you."

The articles of impeachment and the summons were served on the governor.

"All right," said Mr. Sulzer, soon after he reached the capitol.

"I shall exercise whatever functions of government may come before me," said Lieutenant Governor Glynn at his office in the capitol. "I shall continue use my own staff and not enlist the aid of the militia."

Mrs. Sulzer's "Confession" Brings Nervous Breakdown

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Mrs. William Sulzer, who has projected herself into the case of impeachment of Governor Sulzer by "confessing" that speculation with her husband's campaign funds, was carried on by herself, became a still more conspicuous figure in the situation today because of the reports of her nervous breakdown. Dr. Robert Abrams, a nerve specialist, who has treated Mrs. Sulzer before, left New York at midnight for Albany in response to a summons, with the understanding that Mrs. Sulzer was in a serious condition.

Mrs. Sulzer is known among her friends as a model home-maker, and the statements attributed to her regarding her speculation with campaign funds to help meet household expenditures, surprised those who know her. Before her marriage she was Miss Clara Rodelheim, of Philadelphia. After a high school education there, she became a trained nurse in the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago and afterwards served at institutions in this city.

While Governor Sulzer was a member of congress, the couple lived in an unpretentious apartment in East Capitol street, in Washington, where Mrs. Sulzer delighted in playing the role of both cook and hostess when friends were being entertained.

Sulzer Affair Only First Skirmish in Tammany Fight

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—Whatever the outcome of the pending attempt to disgrace and dismiss Governor Sulzer, of New York, Tammany Hall will not be an uncontested victor in control of the New York City and state Democracy. Reliable information here today indicates beyond question that the fight has only started and that Tammany Hall realizes that the affair with Sulzer is but the first skirmish.

The present control of Tammany Hall is facing a battle for its existence, and the personal fortunes of the anti-Tammany forces is President Woodrow Wilson.

There is no doubt whatever that Charles F. Murphy, chief of Tammany, realizes that he is confronted with a fight to the finish. He knows that he well knows he has the president of the United States and all his knowledge, skill, keen diplomacy and ample political resources to contend with. Neither is there any doubt that the attempt to deal Governor Sulzer a smashing blow was born of the desire to get in the first lick in the combat with a power much greater than that of Sulzer.

Whatever the president may admit about his part in the affray with Sulzer, it is certain that Sulzer is being directed from the White House and that his directions are not to engage in any political struggle for control of the governor's office. His instructions are to hold his entire strength for the final battle for the New York state senate and there fight on the merits of the case. If Sulzer is personally innocent he can count on the support of the president to the last ditch.

But whether Sulzer wins or loses, the fight will go on, and the line is drawn. Tammany will be in full control or the present management of Tammany will be a thing of the past. This is the point to which the president proposes to carry the contest, and Murphy knows it and is preparing for it.

President Wilson started this fight when he declined the aid of Tammany in the fall of 1911 in the campaign for the nomination for president. At that time a New Jersey politician, one of the Wilson supporters, went without instructions to Charles F. Murphy and opened negotiation for the support of Tammany for Wilson. Tammany was willing to negotiate, but Mr. Wilson's reply, when the matter was put up to him, was to ask the New Jersey politician to square himself with the Wilson movement. Mr. Wilson said there were some ways in which he would decline to be made president and this was one of them.

President Wilson's next expression of Tammany and of the influence behind Tammany as now conducted, came when he had his break with Colonel Harvey and Henry Watterson. And, finally in the Baltimore convention it was to be observed that all the Wilson original support consistently refrained, first to last, from having anything to do in any way whatever with Tammany.

As soon as Mr. Wilson became president he began to take steps for the eradication of the present management of Tammany. His first search was for a leader in New York City around whom all the anti-Tammany forces could rally. Such a leader he believed he found in John Purroy Mitchell. He persuaded Mitchell to take the collectorship of the port of New York for no purpose except to give Mitchell some necessary added prominence. Then he got behind the movement for the fusion nomination of Mitchell for mayor of New York. Mitchell received that nomination over two other good men solely because of the support promised the movement, through him, from the White House.

How determined the president is that Tammany as now managed shall be crushed, may be inferred from the fact that when the city campaign opens he will hold himself in readiness, if that course then seems justified, to go to New York in person and stump the city from end to end. The fear that this would be undignified in a president of the United States seems to have little weight with Mr. Wilson, provided that by doing it he can eradicate an evil thing from the political life of the nation.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

cotta work is now completed on the two first floors.

JOEL HURT ON SITUATION.

Joel Hurt has returned to Atlanta from New York, and he makes some interesting comment on the situation as regards business and politics.

Mr. Hurt says that some leading financiers of New York think McAdoo's offer of assistance to southern and western banks is a good thing. Others profess to have a vague fear of some mistake the administration may make.

"The latter class," Mr. Hurt said, "follow one another like sheep. I asked them what mistake the administration was making, but I couldn't pin them down to any specific charge.

"I told them that in my opinion we had the wisest set of men at Washington that we had had for several years. The vice president of a big institution told me that McAdoo did well to offer money to the banks during the crop-moving season, and that he had wired his senator, urging him to encourage the secretary, and suggest to him that he accept any good collateral for the loans.

"What this country needs," Mr. Hurt went on, "is better financial aid for the working people who make the crops. It is time that people realized that the mass of the people need and deserve help for their small operations, since it is their small operations that make the wealth of the country.

"This farm credit idea is a good one. The farmers should be given financial aid, and in this way the population would increase and with it our general resources and wealth."

BANKS ARE RESPONDING.

In this connection, a recent article in the New York Commercial is interesting as showing the native surprise of New York bankers that Secretary McAdoo's action should be received so favorably by banks in the south and west. The article is distinctly encouraging, and should interest everybody who deals in real estate. It follows in full:

"Reserve banks in New York City found toward the close of the week that there was little call for further accommodations from banks in the southern and western states. Several banks, with large numbers of interior correspondents, have been surprised to find that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo's offer to deposit $50,000,000 for crop moving purposes has been received with enthusiasm by the most conservative banking institutions in the agricultural sections of this country.

"Private advices received by banks in New York from out-of-town correspondents prove to them that the banks of the interior will go to Chicago to attend the convention of the National Banking association prepared to support the currency bill, as well as the policy of the treasury department, to lend abundant funds for crop moving purposes.

"As an example of this the New York Commercial quotes the following extract from a letter received by a national bank in this city which carries a large number of accounts for interior correspondents from the president of a large bank:

"'Conditions have vastly improved here. Our clearing house authorized Mr. ——— of the ——— National bank of this city to act for the bank shere relative to the allotment of money by the secretary of the treasury, and he succeeded in securing two and one-half million dollars, a part of which will come here, we hope, next week, but anyhow during the month. This money will be apportioned to their capital. The knowledge of this fact is restoring confidence, and the people are bringing their money to bank and depositing it in the banks. That has been our experience for the last few days.'

"This letter is merely an example of the advices banks have received from two-thirds of their correspondents in the south and west. Money lenders and brokers who handle the exchange loans of large financial institutions say that rates are likely to decline considerably in New York before the end of the month.

"If the New York banks are relieved from the necessity of financing the crop movement in the usual way they will be able to accommodate the corporations and to finance the business needs of mercantile houses in the city."
